Turtles on a log

basking in the sun warming up with the day
what else can I say

I can say I found some magic on that log in that pond good fortune came and changed the life of which I am so fond

I can say there was a rainbow that followed me all day that people stopped and stared and listened to what I had to say

I can say I found my purpose basking on that log and that life's balance came down to me and my dog (Willow) but really in that morning sun with the croaking of a frog all I could really say was turtles on a log

Sweet Nectar

fold back the petals moist with first dew tempting , inviting opening for you deep down inside a life elixir dripping , pooling daring someone to kiss her caress the petals odoriferous delight sweet nectar awaits hover , drink then take flight

An unexpected Poem times wrinkle has now shattered and left me holding up the wall while dirty dreams that can't be seen are caught fleeing down the hall waiting for the injured horizon to be huddled forth like a thief into the smoke of a burning boxcar singing a dirge called life is brief yesterday I had prayed for rain now I'm hoping it will cease while standing knee deep in protesters holding hands and chanting for peace across town a statue tumbles into a flaming burning cross where brown shirt men arm salute yelling about how it's a terrible loss morning stabs the treetops and our society will receive them she's an extracting mistress seeking answers faster than philosophers can conceive em listening to the the moan of the west wind as they poison the water front beach dams and tributaries are on fire burned down to solemnly preach we will invite injustice to dinner crack open a fine bottle of wine try to have a conversation say you'll see it will all be fine but we know it will never be fine and we shouldn't keep this company we should throw the door open wide and tell it to leave not so subtly I'm all for a little civil disobedience

I actually try to do what I think is right I am not buried in conspiracy theories although I never used to lock my door at night I just try to do my artwork not care too much what others think I'm certainly not a ladies man but , I never write in invisible ink

Return to the meadow

I slept out in the meadow awaiting your return In a campfire the remnants of your departure burn wondering how how it came to this how it got so far trying to see through the guilt and wondering where you are as I watched the treetops burn in this lost lonely night haunted by the rivers song that's rising in the half light the frost hit hard again this night and laid the meadow down things that I knew as true were scattered all around the past was thick everywhere In sound and vision alike the seconds seem to close in coiled and ready to strike from desperation to hope it only takes time or from desperation to hopelessness which reality was mine so I poked at the embers and stirred up the ashes adding fuel to the inner light of what memory flashes

I wonder where you are tonight and why you went away and if you returned to the meadow I wonder what I would say

Scholarly Wanderers

look to the flowers caress the wind gentle wanderers in natures balance while some are weary others they frighten slapped and trapped to many a nuisance to others a marvel understanding their value seeing the harmony in natures brilliance winds are changing carrying a burden too heavy to know till their absence

endangered maybe beyond return carried with penance pollenators lifes elicicers for when the queen is gone we will miss her hives are falling to a mite that kills ... what will happen when wings that beat for a million years suddenly fall still

She Dances

back lit moon glow she shines dreamy and ethereal moving like the night

wisps of smoke an uninhibited fire a spark all aglow like smoke she curls a dance soft and slow

a thousand nights from a time unknown the moon romances the spirit moves her and ... she dances

Hymns of Previous Souls walking up this abandoned road are the footsteps lost in time where borrowed memories float and ancient bells do chime the holiness of a lost cathedral when you push the doors aside the mysteries of a fallen age their prayers felt deep inside hear the songs of the previous souls their melodies soft but clear singing in a mourning choir those hymns we hold so dear sermons here are set in wood as they reverberate through the wall layers of dust and dirt have settled on the teachings of Peter and St Paul this ancient barn once so majestic and revered collapsing on its own axes has slowly all but disappeared solemnly chant the ancestral names of all those who came before who worked , lived and loved but who can worship here no more

Sleepy Dreams Fade

window shades half open a warm salty breeze soft conversations
drift up from the street smoke from a candle feather pillows

and lace

spiced wine red apples
cool satin sheets

the touch of lace on sweet hidden delights

soft , soulful and blue cool beads of sweat
like mornings first dew

from a deep sated sleep

as morning creeps in through the window
like a thief

Vows of Peace

take me down the path where mighty rivers roar where salvation is a fallacy shaken to its core send me to the peaceful beach and show me where to stand forget about the stars above and have me count the grains of sand show me where the echoes fade into the mists of time ringing out beyond the sea the bells of freedom chime move me to the valley floor from the snowy mountain peak to the forest of sensibilities where vaulted rainbows leak tell me about the dreams I have and how they'll never cease where recurring themes of love and truth whisper sacred vows of peace

Poverty of the Soul in times of trouble drowning in fear and doubt where questions I can't answer are casting all about searching for the answers that time and distance have stole starving and neglected there is a poverty in my soul trying to reconcile belief and non belief looking for that middle ground to open up that window that I always knew to be there but sadly now just can't be found a chill is in the night air the morning frost is keen as for faith or unbelief there is nothing in between

The Tempest

for love and faith sorrow glides on a mourning flame of guilt within the reach of echoes past a mirror of shame is built restless in that ornery shade of beauty tricks of mist beer tops fly to bring about the savage strength to exist someplace in this universe a warrior tramp explains that each and every one of us has the obligation to complain with voices loud enough to break that neon haze of novel hate chapters written so long ago but, still it seems too late to stumble into the gutter of a manic dream that hides behind the blue lit mountains with temporal rising tides but after wails of acid pools where a lonely child cries into the mercury of morality that chants its ugly lies with vows of faith a book that ends with a world torn apart but read the pages where words of love are written for the heart here four angels stand ready looking past the four corners of the earth upon pure white horses where despair is braver than what it's worth a violent storm of vibrant sorrow shot through by fates long bow quenched by torrential rains brought forth by a lost and broken rainbow

Fireflies In A Jar

summers heat cools in an evening meadow lit by a thousand tiny stars down a dusty road of tattooed memories

running wild and free in wilderness dark and still taking a leap into uncertainty leaving childhood for the world abstract with so many jars to fill blowing the dust off all those young dreams fresh cut hay drifts in on the winds from afar barefoot , tanned serenaded by the crickets tune fireflies fly free of the jar split rail fences of summertime dreams an old outhouse, a shooting star dogs running free was it really as simple as it seemed....

Tears On The Moon

Sundown rakes and a meadow sighs treetops burn from innocent lies deep green mountains, left of rage no one leaps to turn the page raindrops play their ancient tune and tears are falling on the moon when love has lost and hate has won when faith and charity become undone when there is no magic anymore just a hole where there was a door justice has lost its faith too soon

equality seems to be on the run lessons taught from father to son somethings should not conclude alone history can't easily be turned to stone it is time to stand , it is high noon with teardrops falling on the moon worshipping on the high altar of death when does humanity take it's last breath is this the end are we better than this or is this just the Judas kiss is this absolutely doom and gloom

what are honorable people to do to stand up for all thats right and true do we draw a red line in the sand or do we retreat and try to understand we better do something and do it soon to wipe those teardrops off of the moon

Captive Oaths

the sunlight plunges in the early hours shadows cast rustling down through the leaves for friends now and forever past inside a quiet cobwebbed room lies many lessons to be learned shelves of books , Persian rugs a row of candles softly burned candle wax truly looks like tears my fallen thoughts were broken spiraling, howling through the years volumes of words left unspoken captive, prisoners of harmony a remarkable pact , a covenant of love the truths held within our hearts solid , invincible wrought from above what we hold captive a hearts promise fair and just no reward offered , or ransom paid a sacred oath to love and trust

Heart of Mercy

crying to be heard in the dimming of dusks last true light and the chilly winds of emptiness following a trail of tears to an eerie blue Twilight what we can't forget is hidden in our hearts buried somewhere behind the midnight rains between the lilting moonlit mirages

and the lost forests tragic last refrains

tolling for freedom back from the endless assaults on morality beating like rain on the hollow log of a reckless and uncertain eternity where a red flower is damp with dew where hatred is lost in the cool of the morn where the thick limbs of the sycamore grew where young dreams are waiting to be born where sundown trails like a faithful dog where the promise of magic is waiting to be revealed where sinners fail and lovers never part where lovers fight on and prophets kneeled where there is still mercy in my heart

Storm Warning

Her voice was calm but in her eyes storms were raging years of torment forever hidden, conflict was waging in her forest of night sleep was a vast forbidden shadow gates of darkness deeper darker than you'd ever want to know a halo surrounds her complicated intriguing rings of sadness halls of sorrow long deserted corridors of madness she's a soft beauty hiding a meadow of faded flowers sirens dance heart pounding into a maze of conflicted hours she's kneeling at dawn dying trees in a deserted quarter pathway to morning solid ground turned to deep still water lovely woman behind her eyes clouds were forming

but in those eyes a storm warning

Convicted Of Beauty

In view of an eclipse a tiger swallow lands captured by the dew drops following rules obeying commands bittersweet, heavy hearted prisoner of the rain traveling with the wind flowers rioting in tear stains locked up in history convicted of being born in your own time without conscience of meaning tears through the windows singing a sad song even the butterfly knows sometimes the rules are wrong

Dusty Dry Red

Smoke rings down the alleyway sleepy curtain blues trying to keep the window hidden with an old sad song that filled the air

her hair in midnight curls
I want her
I could almost die tender persuasion a dusty dry red a corner table to share laughter fades trash cans in the alley red lipstick on her glass matchsticks, coasters hidden in the mirror close a door that's not there broken bricks fire escapes old souls search for new life dancing in lamplight to that old sad song hidden in the windows glare

Heart On A Tree

walk with me in the shadowed moonlight past the sweet mulberry tree with the scent of lilacs bright hand in hand whispering of loves intensity a secret rendezvous , dark and romantic crickets chirp , lightning bugs fire creek splashing on rocks sounding so dramatic stopping eye to eye , electric like a wire innocent honest loves first endeavor a sweet kiss a breast caress dreaming about forever walk with me in the bloodmoon light take me past the mulberry tree walk me past dawns first light

whispering loves true destiny you and me carving our names in that secret whispering mulberry tree

Shadow Of A Storm

although I walked in the
it couldn't be out paced found an abandoned barn hoping to get warm thunder crashed prayers in wood sermons in stone it had been many years since I felt so cold and alone put some wood in the stove and set it afire the scent of many autumns curled in the smoke trying to find my way to your love again and back from wanton desires took my purest thoughts and turned them into prayers prayers to the silence prayers to the loneliness prayers I hoped would uncover the layers a long cold night somehow turned to morn leaving my sanctuary for a long road unknown in the shadow of a storm

Choices

nude on the bed windows wide open upstairs a lone candle is burning forsaken thoughts a door that won't close soft remembrances full of yearning hidden in a veil of fragmented shadows whispers on sheets , a quiet separation unspoken sorrow a sea of despair damp with tears cries of frustration shimmering softly in faded background soft summer breeze put the candle down darkest hour unchosen hell looking for that which cannot be found a critical point life in the balance darkness and light superimpose midnite passes relit the candle finding the strength to put on some clothes

Blue notes

Dark smokey jazzy blues

Heartbreak music or music drenched in romance laughter drifting out to the neon haze of the street dusty reds deep river greens midnite blue reflecting up from a light rain the sounds of many dancing feet

a tenor sax wailed the night alive around them amazing blue notes hot , close exhilarating

Bluesman Jazzman
in the dark pleasure of one more dance

River Music Haunts Me a song so familiar Gypsy music or maybe Cajun I just couldn't place it between us the river was ragin a melody so poignant it was difficult to ignore a hymn, that was the fog on the river and the sand on the shore isn't there a Jasmine that blooms in the night and a moonflower that closes in dawns first light muddy old deep river blues being sung by a man without any shoes

a full moon , warm summer night moonshine whiskey tucked on the ground singing a deep low river song while knowing no one else is around suddenly answering chanteys a duet from barge to shore a violin so evocatively sweet that your heart just tore they only did play for a sweet short time but sometimes there is magic in a moonlight paradigm they carried on the ballad even after they fell from view faint , sweet wisting away both kept playing soft and true haunting stirring touching so powerful that it took me home ...

old chipped paint a porch in a state of disrepair
under the window an old rockin chair a thousand conversations faded echoes lost in dusty old wood mason jars ,old milk bottles in the shade from where a fallen tree stood previous souls who tried to change what could not be changed on a porch with broken shutters and soulful voices lost and rearranged voices out out of mind distant in the fabric of time drunken on the fruits of misbelief and abandoned vines of summertime age old hymms sung on the porch in memorial dust gardens of flowers picked in another age with leafless trees and shrouds caked in rust

tossed in a pond of floating flowers where praying angels wade where timeless voices echo in sorrowful, soulless, treeless shade

Waiting

she sits by the window in a soft breeze from the sea

dreaming in lace of morning fruits and fragrant teas dreaming of the one who sets her free every evening in loves honesty cinnamon oranges

sweet honeyed tea rich chocolate kisses silk lingerie curtains rustle in a soft , salty way waiting for the one who will take her sweet love in the twilight of the day and whisper her name to the stars high above ...

Ancient whispers take a breath in and try to hold it dear while my conscience sleeps and angels crack the mirror breathing in while darkness creeps and lustful truths appear where ravaged rivers run dry and artistic prophets rape fear ancient whispers haunt this dilapidated barn music from a thousand souls harmonize a desolate alarm breathe in the night air to where a lonely martyr cries where the magician disappears and the angry poet lies take a breath of uncertainty in the shadowlands of sleep stirring a wasteland of images as a thousand angels weep

The Path

I travel down a path worn to the quick with the memory that when I was young I believed many times I've looked down this path many times I've taken this path this path that leads to profound silence I was not truths equal I embrace that now when the lilacs bloom and the willows bend when the path fades out and the river ends when the rustle of warm air overthrows a melancholy night and dances along the river in a blue moon light trying to out pace my fears trying to find myself again the melding of soul and fortitude someday maybe I say ... but not today

Edge of a clearing memories lost in the silence of the snow at the edge of a clearing thoughts of long ago as I trudged through the snow looking back on my tracks just as I look back on the feelings that times left intact a break in a bough the snap of a branch the essence of winter lost in a trance something's last forever time , space and love remarkable the idleness fallen from above intrinsic the nature of maiden eyes haunted by suspicions ravaged by lies

late in the day shadows stretched afar sometimes things aren't just wrong or right they just are

A Woman's Song

awoken by woman's Song how it overwhelmed me overtook me upended me tortured me

I tried to roll back the sea the tide rolled in it didn't care

merciless love inspired silent oaths of fate there are things I knew as a child that are now just out of reach the memories come in dreams only to disappear when I awake but in those dreams something so profound that there is only before and after

If only I could remember...

Leaves of Summer

ripples on the water reach my eyes sitting so alone 'neath fallen skies why was it so hard to see what was true when all my life ever needed was you the wind cut loose above the trees tonight waiting for the water to still the night when thinking about all the things I thought I knew it seems all I was ever sure of was you the leaves of summer are now burning on the hill echoed in the smoke the sounds of love cut still running through the hills the rivers flame for written in the wind the sound of your name blackness in the air stills my eyes standing so alone 'neath fallen skies but as the morning light shines on through oh right there , there is you

Candlelight

the provocative shape of her mouth in candlelight her dark eyes gold I felt the weight of endless verse more than my heart could hold prose and passion grab at me and hold with their allure addicted to the written word a habit I've no need to cure my thoughts were tethered back by the memory of her touch breathtakingly beautiful wearing only candlelight , it was all too much the wild mountain scent of her and the meadow flowers fuse if your quarrel is with fate you know you're bound to lose a soft waft of perfume lingers over this tender night I have no quarrels, no regrets as I lay replete in candlelight

Sinuous Grace

I stood there unmanned by silence and darkness the scent of ancient timbers and old dusty papers a flame danced upon the unwholesome air for a small eternity I stood in the breath of moonlight in the cool evening air my head cleared instantly a distant dog bark drifted acrossed the haze of a cobbled lane she heard the front door slam as she read from a book with no pictures that auburn hair that sinuous grace meandering , exquisitely drawn out perfectly sustained a sweet high note looking further into my heart then I would have thought possible that labyrth inside catacombs I felt content in the warmth of her rising sun

Lost Morning

Continetal drift tectonic collisions I walk blindly in the planets upheaval searching for a mistress from a lost morning

Do we live in a universe that is absurd who knows when the door closes or when life hangs in the balance when young I lacked empathy now little things make me sad obscene indifference pretended compassion promises broken artistic allusions

there was a tear in the fabric of the night out of my eyes fell the blindness into the half light I wandered

A cold rain quinces the steamy earth of my winsome soul a forest of happiness envelopes my journey down the pathway and the morning was found

Quiet Night , Invite

Pedestals of burning ashes a symphony of diminutive arches turning point holy water

This morning broke with a watershed of peace the disillusion the disenchantment of my decention

the last time the last thing so quiet in the night the right time the right song to hear it , to invite did you know you saved me made my life helped me live a handwritten note provocative , rustic ecstatic utterances conductive to the atmosphere blindfolded , ascending, reflecting at one with a tempest threshold of mirrors do we make every journey with a purpose....

Under the Porch

Amplified emotions take shape sometimes keenly .
From under the porch a dog took us in .
I look at you and know you are my home you are my strength and my truth .

Through the misty muddle of uncertainty you lift the fog and let me see .
A mist on the water stillness in the pond .
Soundtrack for love of a dream , my dream .

Love is real

Love has no sanctions it is wondrous and free a soft wind on a dusty kettle road can rouse the desires of an old withered tree a kiss of a breeze , a love caress sweet whispers , confess undress

once we skipped to the steps of youth now we dance the dance of autumn a cold winter looms what once waxed so bright and hopeful has waned into a pale sliver of moon melancholy seeps deep on a frozen afternoon the fires that burned so bright are banked to heat the room wrapped in a blanket our feet to the fire the wisp of a shadow the echo of a dream , desire . retire

love is so simple , the advocate for the humanities dapper and dreamy soft to the feel brazen or hidden whisper or a boom of one thing I am certain I feel

Blue Twilight

There's a woman somewhere who writes poems to the air she's blinking tears from her eyes lost but dignified between the turbulence and the serene eyes a wet hazel green she's fighting for her sanity longing to be free

she has taken for so long forgotten life is a song to be sung while you dance in a steamy romance

I wonder what she writes tonight love that's lost ...blue twilight god, love or a life become hardened soft rain in the garden did I know her long ago somehow I really thought so but the memories are not so clear is it just poetry that I hear ...

Huckleberry Stone

late afternoon light through the honey jar flows surrounded by leaves the warmest of glows sit with the leaves

waiting for a secret conversation to begin fireweed honey a mysterious blend that silent conspiracy follow a map till it ends brought forth from love like a huckleberry stone sensual mystical altogether unknown dilapidated heart tupelo dreams orange blossom fight some bojangled schemes

lay down with the leaves put out to pasture whatever mysteries we weave in the magic time of day when the sun fades the tupelos when the fireweed gently sways into the sunset that just cut below that match has been struck there's not a lot we can do to find out what's still sacred follow a map to find what's true someday when the wind does blow straight through that surrealistic cone when we hold a blossom by its stem we will see that elusive...

Raindrops on Cherries the woman who no longer had a dog sat inconspicuously on the stairs of her own home waiting for something that happened a long time ago whispering and moving not knowing she was alone somewhere down the street a lonesome dog did bark and cut through the trees a sorrowful wind did wail wondering can a life be full without sorrows a long life so rich and loving is now a heartbreaking tale she is the goddess of twilight the dusk is in sight and it will not be late feelings of impossible love and wishing my hands were strong enough to change her fate how are you she asks though she doesn't know your name you tell her all about your life and what's most important to you how are you she asks , again and again

she'll tell you all about her day going to church lighting candles saying a prayer
getting ready to make dinner not knowing she has never once left her wheelchair

I look at her and without a doubt I see the courage she still carries in a conspiracy of silence in the raindrops that now drip from the cherries her eyes they are as keen as they ever were is your Mother still alive she asks I smile and say yes and that I love her

Warm Stormy Rain

she droned on about antediluvian ideals for peace or I don't know she forbade me to mention how love feels through the spiritual beauty of her eyes the warm stormy rain poured down on radiant, costly, immovable lies I guess it was hidden in the rain or in the verdor of the trees and grass but a cross that rose was hung from a chain and gave me hope where none trespass could you lay near the creek and hear the grass grow could you hear the boughs bud through the ancient misty glow tears of despair tears of shame lost in those tears years of blame

ox-eyed daisy in a warm summer rain in a lost afternoon in a forbidden refrain

I tried to find my peace though forbidden to speak of love from a chain a dangling cross and still more rain from above

The Alley

don't go down this alley where truth is told , broken bottles captured spirit, a complete dead end lost and forbidden ,all alone footsteps echo, over your shoulder behind your back something slithers bravery runs, courage falters garbage reeks , light bulbs flicker the truth in loneliness abides fish bones and alley cats deep , dark, frightening an open door slimey slippery there is no exit an alley

where truth and honesty thrives
where only the tough survive just an alley do you dare go down alone

Dawns Piper

six white horses with banners displaying cartwheels turning shadowless trees swaying a trickle of tears escalated into a flood the market on the avenue was buried in the mud as the dawns new light started pouring in singing a lament this was a holy place again a fire was blazing near the broken jug of wine squeeze some more juice from the fruit of the vine dreams were colored in a milieu of rust and six pure white horses pulled that cart of hope and trust on the foreshore of the river stand the golden gates of dawn the pipers tune was playing as the flood of tears moved on

Midnite Paddle

down the stream of fellowship into the breath of tranquility close, mist laden shores a million stars assault your sensibilities the bend of the river deep green chill rising in the warm still night the pull of the paddles, duck weed parts Milky Way rising, a mystical sight where the river collides with the sky rhythm of the paddles break the silent moon dark hidden depths, Whitewater lorded shores quiet chatter, a call from a loon the music from a thousand nights a solemn hymn only the river can compose lost in a timeless rhythm that only a paddler really knows at one with the current life in harmony, souls release glide through the water with quiet dignity wth each pull of the paddle ... a sense of peace

Wooden Music

on the back porch their guitars playing an old familiar song two old pals consorts and consul have made wooden music their whole life long two ancient pickers they've grown up together teacher or student partners in crime on an old wooden porch or a park bench or two under the street corners glow playing whenever they have the time two old sidekicks they've written a song or two but mostly they play those ancient universal tunes stories of love and laughter heartbreak and sorrow two old buddies hoping to play again real soon two old farts accomplices and allies two wooden guitars plucking way at an age old song collabortors and chums two old guitars

never getting tired of playing along

The Pack

They had long settled down for the night
the pack was together as the lightening cracked bright they knew instinctively that the rain would follow shifting uneasily, something's not right wood smoke curling from a nearby strike up on their feet nervously dancing the first sparks drifted up through the black night eyes and ears were keen as the darkness gradually lifted suddenly as light as the morning sun huddling together the pack embracing the alphas nowhere to run to so strange to be under attack soon set to perish the most dangerous journey down a trail of tears following an almost invisible path running on fury and courage instinctive with no time for fears over burning brambles through a wall of flame the heat was outrageous into a grey haze of smoke finally into darkness they ran through the night and on into the morning away from that heat so heartless exhausted they howled and they settled back down

and the rain finally came down

Not even the Mule smoke rises from where we used to have a life where we raised our kids me and my resolute wife now no one was lost not even that stubborn old mule what was lost can't be measured the hand fate dealt was so cruel gone are the tractors , the saddles and bits shovels, rakes and all of the hoes next years seeds and this years hay trampled by fate , oh so it goes as that smoke drifted eerily up in the poignant hours of early dawn so we too shall begin to rise up start an honest rebuild , to carry on there's one thing we've learned me and my passionate wife that's not to take things for granted in this fragile but wonderful life .

A Painters Eye

With a painters eye I watch the world in ever changing light with every scene I look for composition
I look for values
I look for hues
I look for chroma
I look for perspective
I look for a story or for drama I look for beauty .
If it all doesn't fit I change my view and start all over again and sometimes I even do it consciously !

Searching Light

To see the robes of the angels dance in the flutter of the breeze to feel the motion of the earth in the rustle of the pinewood trees there are somethings that slip away and somethings you never forget there is a light that's searching for me but it has not found me yet can you hear the ancient voices calling from time so far out of mind the forsaken have been banished the forelorn seek but can not find the timeless , aimless age old relic

in a timeworn breeze in the lost glowing ember of unrequited love lines in the primitive sway of forgotten yellow pines in the burning light of a vanquished heart beating in the chest of antiquated skies in a holy mission that's reduced to the slightest flicker in your eyes do you even hear the whisper of this prayer as a primordial darkness descends and is searching for me here in the ever changing landscape of the colors of my palette that breathless expanse of endless light just might find me yet

A poet in an all nite cafe

As the music escaped from the gallery next door and floated down the avenue the night was ablaze with a blue neon haze a chilly wind blew on through there is a poet In the night cafe his Govinda by his side he lays it all out there for all to see leaving himself no place to hide fearlessly convinced of his own righteousness as he stunk from stale whiskey and a musky stench from the brothel reciting an endless stream of mystical lies spewing them out as his own form of gospel down the street wet pavers reflect the smokey taverns light he rants and he swears that it's he who has woven the very fabric of life You listen and you are swayed it is hard to say he's not right the poet in the night cafe thinks he is the prophet of the ages steadfast in his belief that he not only wrote the book of life but that he gets to turn the pages

he has been stripped naked of his imagination and he doesn't believe in god he has been push to the brink of desolation and that's a mighty hard road to trod

the road to desolation is a terrible road to ride you must ask god to please help you if you find that road is smooth but he doesn't want your sympathy he says he doesn't have anything left that he needs to prove this poet in the night cafe with his Govinda by his side telling his stories of what he's learned in life leading you to where reason and madness collide we have all learn a lot from people who have never written a verse for in train stations , taverns and all nite cafes is where we find the true poets of our universe

Windowless House

she was like the atmosphere of a thunderstorm I easily slip between the past and the present the air was charged so electric and warm current rippled through the fabric of mutual consent

of helpless courage blinded by lust and afraid to move on a windowless house doors were dislodged a porch where our most intimate feelings were drawn

I wish I had the power to shut down the wind to move a mountain aside or to start all over again we couldn't close the door we weren't sure was there soft warm and still it hung in the air we knew we were moving to the end of the line life is too short not to be foolish sometimes but I just had a glance into the river of romance this much I can say that I know how things were and that I can't stay here any longer without her

Faded Flower

faded slate floor a cold fireplace . a very small window overlooking a desolate avenue . living in a hovel where the walls were bare .

sometimes it's sad what closes the doors and that never allows them to reopen .

long abandonment.
There was no path of truth to amble on , just this path that leads to the wooded waters edge , renewed .

She slid lid silently into the water .
The ripples spread out and shivered in the moonlight and then faded away .

A lovely flower that that fell into the water a long time ago .
She floated away upside down and nobody was ever there to care ...

Breaking Free

she pointed to the ridge on the outskirts of town where a fiery moon was sinking low without a sound bright and burnt was its soulful, silent song playing a regent of regret as it slowly pulled her along fractured conversations fire through and erode her mind he filled her body , heart and soul he made her blind she thought of all those wasted years as he filled his glass with her tears

she was suspended by fear and in need of some hope she couldn't say there was a moment when it finally broke but she broke free became unbound to find herself some solid ground a new road leads away from that waning moon silent and fiery serenading her with a different kind of tune self aware , stronger a born again jewel knowing it's only a blink of an eye between the righteous and the fool breaking free to follow a new moon

a new path

a new start to feed her hope her soul

her body

her heart

Never a doubt

I took my dreams and I wondered who would walk with me On that pale moonlit trail

I shifted through my dreams
who would hold my heart when it breaks who would keep on holding till it mends

in those dreams there is always one who walks with me along life's dark and twisted byway when I awake will I wonder who will be my friend who will be there till the end who will walk with me on that pathway of life who will take my hand and hold on tight who will share the fears all through the years who will whisper those sweet things in my ear who will listen and comprehend all those conversations I begin without them all floating away in the wind

now I am awake and I see who has traveled with me down life's wide and lonely highway who wears my arm band who holds my flag high who helps me be all I can be in the shadowland of dreams she was right beside me I knew it

I know it

Blind Faith

Even a second can upset the delicate balance of life everything can change in the beat of a heart

I knew going in my life would change forever that my comfortable existence would be torn all apart faint fingers of mist climbed my mountainside I had been soft as a feather I had been hard as a rock I had probed Mother Nature I had listened as she spoke nothing had prepared me for the earthquake that followed my breathing failed my heartbeat like thunder I had just floated along till the look in her eyes took me under there are many things about us I don't understand I always thought that blind faith would be lacking in me I needed to see

To hear to feel to hold it in my hand

I can now acknowledge faith I don't say I believe as somethings remain a big mystery

a lonely leaf falls a timeless, tireless Cicada sings fall is moving on to my mountainside fast I still hear the echoes of things to come and the murmurs of the past

I throw down my pretensions and turn them into art as I listen to the balance change between the beats of my heart

Memory of love sometimes it's sad what passes for love a flower pressed in a book a letter locked in a drawer a memory faded , no chances took she stands in her garden five purple pansies at her feet her dark curls frame her face as five hummingbirds wings beat she is right out in the garden yet you've loved her from afar so afraid to step forward to be the moon to her star life is about choices don't lock the ones you've made in a drawer there is someone in the choir she is looking at you . afraid to step forward you feel awkward and cower am I judging ? Maybe sometimes it's just sad

what passes for love when there is love all around and you love a memory

Shadow fall

The night sounds whispered in through the open window a hurricane lamp glowed as she reclined in the dancing shadow fall something soft and slow played in the light and crept from the stereo he remembers her eyes though she wore nothing at all a tenderness between them most gentle emotion echoed artfully fulfilled the quiet pleasure of a kiss the record skipped as did his heart her face lit from above an unexpected book beautifully dishabilled to read her right here , right now lovely , warm , beautiful art

The Morning

morning whispers a mystic tremor as souls awake yawning woman tosses the covers as dawn awaits dreamy eyes cast upon the broken sky getting dressed

sleepy words hush the newly born mornings sweet caress

coffee aroma fills her heart as she moves down the stairs familiar creaks and moans follow her to the kitchen she pours a cup

her mystical name as her soul wakes up

morning shows her the road she thought she could never take

On through the roses past the malestream Of mornings gate the morning trembles she is all the things that the night forsakes

she alone is the spirit who won't allow her heart to break spirits lift and gently prod her as she becomes aware

she is the morning

Twilight Song

a favorite child of the angels barefoot , pure .
The morning dew in her hair she was loved in real time she wrapped herself in quiet she heard the murmurs of the past .

Beset by doubt she carried the prayers
black nights without hope hunting for the song hidden in the twilight she closed the Shutters over the windows of her heart

those of us who breathe in liberty with our first breath don't know what it is like to be enslaved she wasn't even allowed the luxury of introspection.

Cemetery hill was flooded .
She was counting to zero down a road to nowhere with nothing in sight sunrise stretched the shadows like broken yesterdays trampling the morning, looking ;

to nurture her prayers or capture her heart .

Edge of the Wind and I refused

I needed to manifest destiny I was a seeker awaiting his message the shadows know the secrets of the hawks eye born to ravaged avenues in a lust filled fort in Eden lost in the hell of Revelations where the breast of the law began

She lowered the timbre of her voice right to the edge of the wind
she nurtured her prayers over her art she had so much hard earned guilt to rescind refusing to embrace true freedom though lovely and rare there is no sure footing in the darkness of the forest still so many questions lost in the book of prayer somewhere in in my journey there is a door left ajar an unexpected staircase leading me to what I seek listening for my message

in the dream of a flowers secret in the stillness of broken raindrops in the shattered book of Friday's prayers in the beautiful promise that was Eden in the eye of the Hawk in the Bloodmoon in the quiet miracle of loves embrace yet, I refused to be born again and I left , to listen to the edge of the wind

Cracked Window

taking a glimpse from the shadows sitting in the corner of a round room in the solace of forgetfulness with a pocketful of leaves there is magic in the mundane my son tells me I'm unique... just like everyone else we all do look out our own windows

there is a painting that I did that no one has figured out yet I know what it is ... it bubbled up from inside from the inner glow of an angel to a fiery burning rat everyone sees something everyone feels it differently uniquely though their own window

Tears of Thorns

Quiet light breaks the fields played out a thousand times untold .
Lost in the ceremony of fire .

She stood naked in the hours and wept with no tears .
Trying to make herself invisible beneath the thorns of the Rose .

surreal in a moonless night .
Born to the world in the light of a candle .
Surrounded by the quiet verbs of kindness .

Her voice was without seasons .
Ringing bells not heard in any church .
Waging war on emptiness, darkness and storms of despair.

She can make words sing or bleed sometimes both .

She reads my poetry like it is her own private orchard with fruit you can't wait to taste .
She can warm the hearts of people born to stone .

I knew there was a majestic mountain obscured by clouds of thunder .
Coastal tides shed their skins and danced in the inland forests .
She seized onto the light of her singularity and finally brought forth her tears .

Sacred Creek

In a waning light a painting from a faded memory .
I burned from despair and failure of imagination. wondering when the sun went down on me . a barren field , a leafless forest climbing a lawless ladder . in my eye a rose burns . perculating just below the surface ready to blow the sound of a Lyre .

Taking a a glimpse into the shadows of self doubt and indecision .
that creek of purest sorrow smelling of musky soil or semen . dank dark wine bites my tongue I taste the mask of fury carved in stone.

A dead fall felled in a time not of this age covered in lichen , insects and vines .
do we must we hold every moment sacred ?

Temporal Faith Floats mysterious and lunar purged of all the benefits of magic .

she evoked the quiet ecstasy of mystical prayer .

a gentle feather lost in a tear drop . temporal words walked her back from the edge.

bloodied by a thorn from a yellow rose .
buried deep in the paltry light that silhouettes her hair . looking at the soft eye of dawn . knowing how much I've surrendered, forever bereft of the darkness .

I felt the melodies of faith and lost her at the renegade first light .

so religious the fury of the extinction of hope beautifully expressed but slow to comprehend she handed me a bible .

I struggled forth into the artillery of knowledge listening to the dark matter of crucifixion music .

her story moves forward through the stream of time on thin ice . lost in the pale harmony of the grandeur of madness.
she believes she will sink into that ethereal stillness of dawn .
I believe her soul will float .

Beyond Pain

deeming to defy the morning of its logic, pennies on the eyes of dawn .
Earthen pillars of light and shadow, were gestures of burning faith . making you believe in the death of the Lowlands Goddess.
No birds will sing today .

The Marshlands smelled of unanswered prayers .
Looking for the restoration of her lost honor but , haunted by a thousand slain gardens .
Was a quiet alumni of the rain .

a dark heart with a bloodied mind churching me with prophetic dreams .
A fallen castle, shattered walls , breached moat .
Listen to my darkness,
beyond pain
but not beyond sorrow .

Staring with just just one eye through the lunette of the guillotine at thirteenth century morals .

Soaring wounded Angels had made a covenant with the Harvest moon .
Violence is always ripe it never has a season !

Fear is not sacred the safest places can only be visited . in the corridors of endless sleep , there is no difference between life and art .
It is where the Goddess shall dwell forever !

Inside Out

a single lonely Sparrow cries .

He will never be back from infinity.
Apprenticeship in the Guild Of disaster .
He slid through the mist and into the darkness .

The intensity of dreams the banditry Of ideals .
The nut house factory of covert conclusions.
Fragments of wisdom .
Music lost in a time continuum.
It should have been his time to judge the fury of the wildflowers in a storm .

Unnerved by silence I watched from a house without words .

An innocent , cruelly struck by fate .
He was a friend of Dorothy's and a friend of mine .
He will never see the Rainbow from the inside out .

A sensitive man draws eire .
He was where the butterflies and the Angels came to be born .

He lived from the inside out .

Comfort in remorse .
Torment in conscience .
Regret in waves of aching emotions .
I cry for atonement and a salve for my soul .

That mysterious light that came from him also came from me and from everyone and everything , but I just couldn't see inside out .

Soft

A fever of superstition nipping at a butterfly. a shared adversary bounded by secrets .
Her eyes a soft quiet brown.

A plate spinner in a vast forest of lies .
The embodiment of the thorn .
The essence of the Rose .
The soft hand of dusk pulled down the night .

Not recognizing the borders balanced on a bottle of wine .
Hypnotized by the color of spectral vibrations.
Her voice was soft and calm .

Knowing that life oscillates between the adventurous and the ridiculous .
The heart she hadn't wanted to give away , softly broke .

Night Sounds

she woke to the soft rumble of thunder .
Then heard nothing but the night sounds .
Something sparked sharply through the air and she floated through it .
She had cried her tears of misery.
She had dropped her delicate facade but it did not shatter .
She had lived a life of lies and deception.
While she wanted to put it all behind her .
She knew that there would always be eyes on her back .

So she let the thunder roll on in and she breathed in the night sounds .
In the stillness of the moment truth came from a place of vulnerability and solitude.
She knew in time she would suffer greatly .

The song of uncertainty broke just behind the dawn and shattered those night sounds .

Clouded

From the threshold of my dreams.
Deeply dampened by shame , clouded by fears .
Educated , but colloquial be damned trying to keep the door cracked open .

Weeping for a woman I did not know from a time I am not from .
Quiet pride and pretty grace drenched in the purest sorrow.
She was righteous among the chosen .

Not a lot of noise as I pass through the years .
Though I feel the Earth's vibrations.
I feel the blood of the Earth .
Clouded by the winds desperate vision and the silvery quiet of dawn .
I am looking for promises I need to believe .

As I exit from my dreams through the crack in the door .
Maybe I'm ready to make some noise .

Alibis

Obsessing the obvious, riding the winds formal haunt .
Stepping sideways across the alibi of dawn .
The nearness of morning weeps On blossoming cherries.
Feeling slated and slightly weak .
Sad eyed conversations.

Trying to to find her level ground seeing the big picture through the smallest details.
Knowing there was no alibi .
Just having to learn to live with the truth through misty waves of planetary storms .
Her thick socks soundless on the hard boards .

Secrets from the Elder's age the thief of dawn past a narly oak .
Speculating on Arabian horse carrier alibis .
Washing morning from her feet .
Prancing horses , sad brown eyes on the move .

She slept with the window cracked open and awoke to a gentle rain .
She pulled up the covers and curled, but finally woke to the soothing sounds of birds .

Her alibi was broken by
about art poems with elusive meanings .
The Coyotes alibi stretches the dawn .

Raining Heart in Silence

She listened as the silence filled her being .
She knew the flowers were broken as was the stillness in the woods .

A hawkshire moon , the malice of starlight.
Brittle with frost , adrift, tribeless in the naked night of dreams .
Her lava flowed in an unrelenting quiet fire of silence .

She needed a resurrection as her storm broke , volcanic .
With a simple but deadly logic she hung on the moon .
A raining heart plucked from a midnite storm of wrath .

As the stream rushed darkly beneath a meadow of virgin white The eastern sky started to glow , a whisper in the air , a softening light .
Troubadors abound and sing her sad song .

Her soft whisper was first felt on the far coast of midnite.

A wounded soul , highly wrought with pain .
An owl flew low and hid by the lonely crippled creek .

Over the quivering lips of dawn a bitter seed erupts .
Like the fallen bliss of an ancient creed .

Epic silence .
Except for the crunch as she steps to the grass .

Second Truth

The trail ahead was stacked high with thunderclouds that never came their way .

They rode the ridge where the flowers faded . where it did not matter that they knew no names .

They built a fire under the Milkyway by an avenue of quiet trees .

When she laughed the dancing flames were trapped in her eyes and from behind she heard him smile .

Lost on the borders of heaven a quickening of the moonlight the limitless depth of color her hot breath on his face .

After a while she slept in his arms .

Two people who met too late maybe years ago under a thinner moon and a wider meadow the flowers would not have had to fade .

Doubt settled heavily but no shame .
Certainly no shame only a false rainbow .

He wrote with a layer of words underneath the words that only she would understand .

She can listen to forever relative to the quicksand of the cosmos.
Born through time into infinities energy .

A second truth to the wind .

Leaking Clock

There was nothing left inside .
No dreams, no compromise.
It was all over .
Sages of broken promises.
Down from the mountains, lost in the rough country .
Hoping for answers to questions that have no answers .
Beneath a handsome , lonely old tree she couldn't quite kill him but , she died a little herself .

Fear was stuck so deep in her heart , it could not be dislodged.
How to move her anger past her fear .
He kept her from something she knew was her pride .

Sowing seeds of despair .
Crying tears of regret .
So tied up but , she can't quite cut the rope .

In love she trusts , driftwood , deadwood , broken branches of damaged comfort .
Desolate darkness prevails .
Black widow answers to the cinch of the rope .

From another lifetime inside a clock that leaks the future .
There is a language in the mountains that is calling her home .

Key of Sands

The dry leaves a whisper in the cool night air .
The future lurking face to face with the moon .
He drank in her sigh .
Inhaled .
This night must last till there is no tomorrow.
No thorns .
No tears .

Feeling a pleasant stir darkness faded and slipped into perspective.
Ocean dancers dream the music of the sands .
The young optimistic the old find acceptance, In dreams that have gathered dust .

Spiritually bloodied and beaten .
The morning was chaos in a minor key .
In the waiting air of the storms eye .
The old growth forest waded into the shallows .
As the wind moaned like a salty cello .

The flag of her life was set at half mast .

Following a path of fire .
Of ice .

Listening to to the song of the angels.
Carried on ancient winds of sorrow , she knew all the secret places between right and wrong .

The angels song was one of tears .
That lightly pushed the waves over the thorns .
As he ran back from the morning.
Fighting the odds of the elements she was as indogenous as the roots upheaved from a withered oak .
A wave of desolate fury inside a sea of wrongfulness or rightousness .
This journey is not over .

Laughters Lost Echo

Trying to heal a broken spirit damaged by loss and in search of purpose

Echoing richness in peripheral thoughts crying for atonement in each anguished breath knowing this is our precious life even if any soft places remain well hidden

Fleeing outside to disappear in the seven streets of Antioch asking for a god to save me cutting the fool , with prayer losing the trust of the world as bells rattle in the belfries

Ideals were put to the torch Sequoit Creek smelled rich and dark with sweet sentimentality creative vibrance and my loves lost laughter

Nothing happens that has no meaning all of our experiences connect our lives through the open window of time into the nuisances that move the tides , paint the Terracotta steps with snow and steal the Deserts wind

I make an incantation for mercy Unreconciled to suffering waiting to be cleansed of the unknowable the uncaring and the indifferent stars watch from above like fate in a mysterious Biblical betrayal laughter fled and became a Spider lost in snow .

The Shadows Shadow

Goodnight my friend.
I say my prayers of the Earth of the four winds and the rains .
You have given all that is inside your heart .
I will think of you when the moon drinks from the rivers cove within the cold ashes of the night fires secreted in warm solitude of a hollow beneath the low lonely trees .

Only the mountains now
seem immortal .
It is true and right to die .
We navigate the high passes over into the valley of the shadow below .

My Friend
I will look for you when the moon chases the horizon.
I will look for you
deep in the shadowlands
of mist.

will we come together over the shade of the wind , inside the shadows of the shadows .

Goodnight my friend,
travel that wind into the mists,

cold and damp and I will say my prayers .

Smile

Soft sea breezes .
Cigarette papers , matches.
The cooing of the dove .
A candle drip of homemade soap lingers in the walls .

Sweet pouty lips , petals and thorns .
Feathers woven throughout her hair .
Lacey dreams of wetness and warmth .

Sugared teas,
the fragrance of love .
Oranges ,
spices , brown earthen incense .

Out on the street a child's laughter through the parted curtains of time .
Lost in mystery comes a word from the ages .
Love ,
love ,
love,
she smiles.

Shadow of the Arrow

Felt the gentle kiss of the feather.

Saw the eye of the sparrow as the fog of memories lift.

Stolen sunlight,
Hidden moon .

Felt the weight of melancholy

Arc through the minkhole of faded dreams .

Saw the trees dance into the morning, swathed in heavenly light .

Saw their echoes bounce off the future .

Felt the birds remember the wind .

Earthen nerves, Silent springs .

Felt the noose slide down from the mantle .

Into the astrodust on the floor .

Saw the bow pulled back on the morning.

Felt morose as the arrow flew by us all .

Solemn Revelations

The shade on the window kept the morning outside.
Garish , grey and miserable Christ looks down from the wooden crucifix on the wall .
Instead of rejoicing she shudders from unending revelations .

A small gurgling creek wraps around fortitude.
Blue and purple wildflowers by the musical water in splays .

Traveling to the left of the fork till starlight hit the dirt.

Thorns of the Rose Violets without .

Intimacy with no submission strength to strength in a night without questions.

Her eyes had the look of a smile fading.

No respite part love ,

part war .

Beyond her realm, darkness.

A solemn stone castle burns midnight blue.

Quiet Obsession

She was born in a perfect moment in a garden of roses.
She was always more North Star than lover .
She grew up in the watch fires of the mystic .
She envoked the beauty not given to nihilistic angels arguing over hell .

The suns first rays fingered their way out onto the dusty road where forbidden love ambushed me and held me through my long season of redemption.

Grace And quietude found me then .
In her rapt absorbtion of prayer , She smiled .

Silent as smoke from the woodstove.
She was the sorrow in the moon swollen tides but , would cry no more tears .

My hours of creation reaped death from the lack of true melodies.

Tap on my window, knock on my door.
She is the music of my immortal soul .

With an awkward grace She finds me in my shallow creek.
I can say no more.

Quiet Lion

Snow falling through a hole in the roof.
Blue lights in a Thousand castles .

Through the door that no longer opens the Quiet Lion still speaks .

My Fathers whispers still ring in my ears .
Through a house full of dust and windows made of Stone.

Barefoot at the waters edge trapped forever in the slack tides .
Something inside has broken I know it will never heal .

Into the kiss of the summers heat .
The rumble of the brown Earth.
The rhythm of the gentle waves.
A tolling of a lonesome bell .
In the swirl of the quiet light .
His name is always on the wind .

May the Angels speak the ancient whispers and sooth the Quiet Lion .
Say his name for peace .

Scars of Hope

Natural innocence and simplicity , a glorious arc of rainbow charity.
The pulling of silk through a loom .
A magnificent child of the storm.

Holding pureness feeling my love without knowing .
Asleep at the wheel of just being born.
The silence was deep ,
sweet and sad .
Her every breath was a provision of sacred order .

I had an absolute vision .
a prelude of silent music.
The wind sang sweet lullabies born of time and starlight.

The music asked questions of the breeze, to butterflies and angels .
But, was answered in a thunderous storm.

Disintegrating realms of hope who will advocate for a beloved soul .

Life's wounds move on but , we are left with the scars .

Love Asleep

The longing again showed up in visceral force .
Quiet as a shadow.
Thunder through my eyes .
A story lost worth telling.

Warm wine in the summer market .
Sunstains and purple shadows.
Red trellis roses on the quick .

A galloping white horse .
A ladder over a wall of carvings.

A bridge to a morning duel .

Chains on the prisoners locks on love asleep .
Souless mercy ignites the bonfires of yearning .

Homemade shutters capture the mirrors cry .

A pledge to a broken God .

With loves protection lost it's the end of the Starlight .

Shadows Shadow

Goodnight my friend
I say my prayers of the Earth , of the four winds and the rain.

You have given all that was inside your heart and have moved on to the quiet peace
of the shadows .
Where the winds have stopped and the stillness is eternal.

I will think of you when the cold ashes of the night fires are relit by the dying embers of a shooting star .

seem immortal.
To navigate the high passes
of the shadows below .

My friend the hour of the mirror will hold us .

I will look for you whenever my heart feels the tug of the roadless horizon.

I will look for you
of mist .

I know we will come together when the winds blow inside the shadow
of the shadows.

travel that wind into the mists
cold and damp .

And I will say » my prayers .

The Hours

Eternity between the moments of the seconds .
God between the seconds of eternity.

The flower screamed in tendrils of smoke .
The tragedy of the fundamental redemption of sins forgiveness.

Alone on a lost ribbon of road .
Adrift in the cool dog eared dawn .

Destiny has whispered in my ear .
Forcing me to listen .
A friend lost , another a lie .

A hole in the meadow filling with smoke .
Shadows laid claim by destiny's hours .
Two tracks thought true One lost , one forsaken.

Terrified this is a test from God .

Burden in the hours from this age of faith .

Ditches of sorrow trails of betrayal,

The smoke bleeds

and I confess.

Silence Kills

Tears pool at the feet of mortality.
Candles line the stonewalls of fate flickering in the rain .

Cutting a tunnel through the silence of the morning .
To elicit forbidden sensations of lustful embroidery.
Spiking trees to save the forest , pulling stakes in civil disobedience.
All within the nuance of a border town where the misty swamps hold no fever .

Sweeping views of the hinterlands with backwater thoughts In the rain .
I have carried the burden of a thousand bad decisions with a sleepy vagabond gilded halo .

Waiting for the bridge to be rebuilt after it burned in the dawn .
Showing me the forest as I'm stuck in the trees.
Memories really mired in the mud of my sacred platte of ground .

Lost in a rainy midnight silence of fear .
Affliction ,
the laurels of the fires of adversity.

Lightning flickered in the stillness of the night .
Quiet but for the distant thunder.

Aware that the silent rain had ceased.

Thorns and Thistle

Life is beautifully random .
Accidental chaos .
A draining rainbow riddles and conversations.
Rain and smoldering seasons .
Every theme a lovers soul questions, locks and Minor Keyes .
The verses of the mind
The poetry of the soul .

Thus to be remembered.

Sailing ships of worship slip away from the shores of religion.
Poetry of composition brush strokes of fate .
Along suffering vows of indifference.

Thorns and thistle,
Rivers and stone .
Time lost in heartache Spiderwebs across the lense of dawns looking glass .
Carrying daisies with walking sticks and rain .
Time that's worn flattened and ragged .
Ripped from the lining of a golden meadows hem .

Beneath a quilt of sorrow is a straw filled conscience.
Making my peace behind a long thicket of wild rose .

Soulful Peace

Lonely footsteps echo behind silenced by the falling snow.
While the circle continues joy and misery engulfs you .
As the wind says stay... or go .

sleeping the song of solace in the seduction of the highway.
Some pain you don't come back from .
It steals your breath and binds your heart.
As the magic fades There is a treasures hidden in a lifelong friend that's lost .

She seeks refuge in her box of paints As her children weep and the walls lean in .
The years have made her strong or hard .
Echoes of her youth excite her .

Through it all as the colors of life change .
She pulls beauty from her brush and her poetry is .
An intrinsic blue shirt of many hues and deeply Devine hair awaiting the wisps to come .

In the clearest vision from an ordinary day .
Her little children laugh a furry dog barks the tea kettle whistles a gentle breeze blows .

Thankful for bravery to be safe in the thunder.
Collect your tolls .
The debt has been paid .
Let peace sear your soul .
It is not forbidden .
You have turned on the light in a darkened room .

Window shades half open a warm summer breeze.

drifting up from the street.

and lace .

Spiced wine , red apples,
cool satin sheets.
The touch of lace on
sweet hidden delights.

soft , soulful and blue .
like mornings first dew.

from a deep sated sleep .
As morning creeps in
like a thief.

Lowling of the ages

Ancient whispers reverberate through the valleys beyond description.
Saddlesore and invigorated reins and stirrup sunsets .
Praying to the fire before the lowing dawn .
Smoke rises on an early morning snow .
Hoof tracks coerced in the silence beneath the winds .
There is a trust inherent between the horses and Their cattle .

Those ancient spirits guide us , So strong and unwavering we drop to our knees in awe .
And weep .
This land cannot be taken .
This land unyielding and relentless.
This land that cannot be controlled.
The hours hold no mercy for the profound soul of another age .
The duel between land and Skies .
Freedom in tears and brambles , the thistle and the thorns .
Ridges and thunderheads Collide, beautifully deep beyond words .

Casting the dreams that whisper in your eyes .

Hard work and long days honor in the wind runners, depth in the spurs and the saddles.
In the feathers and the ropes.
Pilippa smiles , she's home on the range .

It seems there is only the skies above and the earth in your toes.
The open range , the one you love .
Dreams filled with Prairie stars .
The big skies seemingly dancing with the virgin land creeping on forever .
Maybe this land defeats us .
This Savage land whose music forever haunts us .
Or maybe it defines us .

This vast landscape of dust , time and heart .
Boundless energy, romance and danger .
Never wanting to leave it to never say goodbye.
If there is a judgment at the end of this trail .
Know it's to follow your Lodestar.
Take risks and begin anew.
Know this land fills your heart and sears your soul to those ancient whispers.

Ashes

Truth hidden in lies Satan in the books on fire.
Haunted by the educated smoke and the whispers of knowledge lost in the wind .

Frightened by the empty soul who's facing eternity alone .

Slithering evil in snakes eyes lightning crawls inside the nerves welding eyes open in terror.

Confessions of sleepy loneliness In the restless path that follows the smoldering residue and ashes of literature.

Demons in the shadows of dreams Roughhanded angels deferring to the resplendent ones who propagate lies and burn our books .

Sorrow?s Choir

A cold white mist on the horizon.
An Eire voice that sounds like bees.

Am I floating?
Am I alive ?

A choir of innocence immersed in sorrow.

Standing at the Barb wire of the saddest place on Earth.
Trying to understand the unforgivable.

Being led by conscience and a buzzing mist.
Lifes choices are hard and usually unfair .
But, you choose and move on .
Hoping you will not need to be forgiven.

The path forks through quiet emotions.
But , the truth is always well hidden .

Rivers Sad Song

Loose lines, mudflats the lonesome sparrow sings.

The walls around Eden are gaured by... half peace melodies where rivers birth my saddest songs .

Cinders in the moonlight romance sizzling in the desert has moved to the Tundra.
Pulled by the oppressive dream of heat lightning.

Trying to silence the Rivers music.

Screaming eagles ate the Coyotes howl.
Recessed from the icy pain of spoiled humanity.
Rivers of sorrow.
Rivers of pain .

Waiting in the reeds to sacrifice my soul.
Yearning to caress your intelligence.
Lost in your magic the flower yet to be named .

Lamenting that I will never know your mysteries , your melodies nor the essence of your song .
Your gentleness or how you found the way you love .
While Its a loss
I can not know still it haunts the River of my soul.

The beating cross the burden I bear .
Singing out my saddest songs.

Tragic Décolletage

As I sit down to paint an image That rolls through my eyes like thunder through the valley.

Music all around a ripple in the ether.
Used as a cats paw from the misty East to the dark veil of midnight shadows .

Vinegar and honey .
Freedom our glory entitlement our tragedy.
A broken anvil of shadow men to a fearful God .

We met at the twilight of twilight .
As the waning moon Floats on the slithering river.

Praying for vengeance into the décolletage.
Mosaics of pain and betrayal inspiring me to create.

Sanctuary

Crucified, vilified her faith eroded, heeding the call of the open road .
To be pushed over the precipice exiled from all memory, trees exploding A mist from under the pond .

An exercise in innocence.
Sensual lips , a tramp tattoo .
An ancient haunted terrified voice .
Confessional silence, more smoke than flames .

A journey , searching ,stretching through the ages .
A stand of trees in a yellow meadow. holding a profound message guiding her life .

Tiny leaves sing shadows across a sunlit Doe .

Sparks arise ashes fall thrones and needles thrust in blood .
Someone , sometime somewhere will see her heart and know her truths .

Perhaps in the sanctuary of the cool dark mountain air .

Lost River Glen

Bound to the trees left to the ages.
Swallowed in the mists of Avalon.
A child becomes a woman grown .

Hoping for a revelation that quells my tears of grief .

My pride endures quite heavenly.
My bouyant breath explodes into a riot of pines, mountains and moonlight mists .

From a deeply shadowed valley holding the mountains at bay .
I drink remorse and crumble to sadness.

Coyotes prowl my midnight shivers.
centuries of tenacious trees tripping down a tangled path of regrets .

The last vestige of seconds ticking.
Countless , infinity lost in the River Glen of the morning sun .

As the Ferryman crosses the River calling .

These hours

possessed .

Pushed

Tracking through the old growth, rain at the edge of the world.
Knowing the rapture has no plan for me .
Just rejoicing in the rain and the wind .
My heart bleeds creations blood.
Stardust formed my being .

Burning wildflowers coat my dreams in a smoking glaze of eternity's memories.

I find myself outside salvations promise.
My breath cuts the depth of melancholy's theft .
Unstable in the passing of grace .

Preferring to take the apple right off the tree.
Smelling the fresh cut grass.
Plunging my fingers deep into the rich black dirt of freedom.

Pushing me to my rubicon my idiom.

Always knowing what's my guiding light .

As the moons out of focus through the trees.
