I Know Why

The Sweetest Poet

One foot on the Nile

You shape the horizons, adorn the abyss
You light the darkness
with a starry mist

You color the dawn
and the setting sun
whisper a warm breath and Spring has begun

One foot on the Nile,
the Himalayas
surrender their claim

Wield the morning sun, the stars humbly refrain

Yet, merciful is your tone toward a speck like me

Your star still shines

I don't know where you've been,
by the song you sing I'd say it's sad and grim darkness and despair you've seen your share
where even shadows
won't dare

but your star still shines

You're standing tall stacking stones
side by side
building a wall to keep your soul inside

you couldn't hide it with concrete and steel
six feet in the ground

so bright and beautiful it would light the world on fire and burn all day

Your star still shines

You've Run a Long Way

Hard times
down a long road troubles, like the weight of stone it seems like a lifetime's gone

Blood and ash
and shallow graves darkness fuels the burning rage and hope goes up in flames it took a lifetime to find just to watch it fade away

with all your might till the moon and the stars touched the morning light run all your life and everybody wants to know why you just can't let it go

Sweeter Than Gelato

and everybody knows
her mama must've found her down in the grove

way down

she's sweet as spring
full in bloom
like angels' trumpets
all in tune
playin' hallelujah
under a strawberry moon sweeter than summer wind dancing through summer cane in the sweet magnolia rain I'm just sayin'

she could have been a circus show
a holiday parade
the ocean's serenade and I'm amazed

she's sweeter than the dawn the chorus in the song of the setting sun shining on more brilliant than the day the brilliance of her way is why

the heavens say

"there she goes!
shining like a star,
lovely as a rose"

sweeter than gelato
and everybody knows

I know why you hide,
and always withdraw,
and refuse to socialize

some say you're traumatized others think you're sad some say evil lurks within some, that you've gone mad but I know why

I know, that deep inside,
with all your might,
you're holding back
the most beautiful light a brilliance so great it would blind the sun and all the world

would come undone

so you keep the secret
and bear the pain,
you burn inside
and take the blame

may God have mercy
unbind the light
it's your purpose
it's your right

shut their eyes

and even mine,
It is your turn,
to let it
shine!

Charred black and ash grey best describe her mood today She's on fire!
So I'll shut my mouth,
throw away the key
and savor the taste of humility
