

Anthology of Eugene S.

Presented by

My poetic side

About the author

One who crawled from the swamp embracing every word he ever found.

summary

Woke Manifesto

when you know it's real

What're The Mazers Doing Next Door?

What did you say?

Waiting for the Storm

Veil

Unproffered

Túatha de Ri?nap

Trickster

Transitory Existence

totally getting the neon pig

Tools of the Trade

To Bide as a Child

Time

tides

They

There's No Comfort In Destiny

The World Never Wanted You, and Neither Did She

The Third Way

The Strange Consequences of the Modern Age

The Night

The Modern Era

Super-Powers? I Would Be The Greenman!

Stormy

spin the black circle

Somnolent Struggle

Sleepy Shadows

Sixty Taps in an Olde Swamp

Single Sigma Empath Aquiescence

Sigmatic War

Sigmatic Lament

Sigma Surface Mindset - Response

Sigma Surface Mindset

Shaun

shadow ii

shadow scene two scene one

Salience

Ropes, Possessive Women, Covid Shots & Sand

Romantic Interlude

Riddle II

Riddle

Rhythmic Beeps & Bloodstained Sheets

Revolving Door

Ren Gill III, Part I - Blurred Vision

Ren Gill II

Ren Gill

Reminiscing Runaway

Regulatory Musings

Quiet Mysteries

Quaff

Portents VIII

Portents VII

Portents VI

Portents V

portents ix

Portents IV

Portents III - Reprise

Portents III

Portents II

Portents

Pointing Fingers

Pink Cloud in the Sky

Peregrination

Paul Atreides

Paths XVI

Paths XV

Paths XIV

Paths XIII

Paths XII

Paths XI

Paths X

Paths VIII

Paths VII

Paths VI

Paths V

Paths IX

Paths IV

Paths III

Paths II

Paths

Passage

Parallaxes

Old Lighthouses II

Old Friend

Not the Religion I Knew

Noir

Nigh

neue welt

Narcissist

My American Finger

Muzzle

Multiplicity Duplicities

Monster

monomania

Modernity

moab

Missing

Miser

Memories of a Bastard Son

Memento Mori

Manifest (btfeu)

Lush III

Lush II

Lush

Lost Title

Leviathan

Lessons from the Beach II

Lessons from the Beach

Kingly Lines

Karmic Justice

Just Before

Jeff Buckley

Irma and the Weatherman

Invasion & SJW Justice

Intimation

Interlinear Goliardic Rant I

Injurious Destiny

Infinitesimal

Individuals

Illusion?

Idalia, Predictions Perceived

Idalia, Depredation Achieved

Idalia, Acrostically Received

Ian

I See the World

Hungry II

Hungry

how?

Hourglass

Hole In The Windshield

Harbinger

Grindavíkurbær

Gammadion

Fragility

Foundation of a Question for the President II

Foundation of a Question for the President I

Forgotten Grave

fire

Fast Eddies Pier II

Fast Eddie's Pier V

Fast Eddie's Pier IV

Fast Eddie's Pier III

Fast Eddie's Pier

Familiar

Facetime

Expectancy

Endless Aftermath (Death of a Corporation)

Elemental

Effect

Ecclesiastical Musings at Sunset

Dunedin Drowning

Driven by the Moon

Drinking Mead in Roosevelt's Horse Stable

Directed Dead End

Detach (meant)

Dedication to Kujo

death's lonely door

Death of a Magnate

Cumbre Vieja

Crazy Girl

Counting

Coronal Mass Ejections

Closed

Cancer

Broken Water Pipe

Broken Twice Over

Boxes II

Boxes

Born of Chaos II

Born of Chaos

Blue Mask

Black Orchids

betrayed

Bereft

bastardis in praecipitium

base

Autumn Dreams

Another Variant of King Richard

Anathema

An Illegal Alien Lives In My Birdhouse

Amber

Age of the Zombie II

Age of the Zombie (The Obedient Patient)

æfensang

Act of Defiance

acquiesce

Abode

A Tribute to Sand

A Tocobagan Riddle for Today

A Poet's Mantra

A Liter and Promises of Broken Thoughts

A Human Menagerie

A Dream Exposed

?????? ?

?????? / ???? / ?????

3rd of Sh'vat

... are of a kind with those of myth;

Woke Manifesto

There are many many things that are trending
And here we are again at the ending You notice how the world keeps turning You notice how the fires keep burning You notice how the words and the ways and the powers keep churning as we're falling and we're falling not learning just burning

Now many many things have begun How many more days in the sun can we practice
WE WILL practice all the methods and the words and the ways to distract us from the truth
You need proof

Don't look at the sun, just look at the world, just look at the life and what has unfurled in the days, and the days, and the days, and the days all behind us

There are many many things that are ending All the lies that we speak, they are blending You notice how the mood has darkened and how the blinded world has hearkened to our words, to our ways, to our plays, if only just to mark and...
Set the goals Feed the coals Strike a spark Then disembark

And what a hot message we are sending of how we want to see it all ending

We will poke

We will stoke and keep stirring the flames, and playing the games, and blowing the smoak

See the joke

Are you woke

Just look at the sun, don't look at the world

You'll see that your life and all that's unfurled was meant to burn and meant to crumble beneath the weight of a life that you fumbled

when you know it's real

all it takes is that memory, a weak moment, or a likeness, somewhat the same it is always about the trauma, unconsoling continuously seeping through your veins to find its way into the currents of the mind flowing slowly, the most dreaded of all banes never ending are tragedies of your youth even here in this most present age stories that end up in darkness, and ill favor self-imposed isolation, a lonely cage swells of emotion, emerge from the deep to take it all beneath a watery grave you find yourself suspended, no control grasping for the arm that might save to hold on to hope that the wave will descend that your eyes will again see the light of day that there will be something solid to feel another ally to help chase all the pain away for this is the game of those who are tortured whose past, and whose future was waylaid the battle must be fought, the pain endured if ever there was to be a future way to establish oneself, to overcome the bane to traverse the path that must be laid a pathway forward, only a few can see that leads to the light of a hopeful day, for to focus on that is to be uniquely free free of the past, free of the pain, free to stay all of the wrongs that should never be a day when tears, you will no longer weigh

What're The Mazers Doing Next Door?

Awakening... what day is it?
Oh... have to get ready and load up all of the supplies.

Trying to remember the details:
carboys, buckets, honey, don't forget the yeast, the canes...

Crazy thing to do, really - making such an ancient libation in a world so rejectful of the past.

Better take some of the old mead.
They'll be cooking out, socializing...
Ah! Dammit! Forgot the water!

After a panicky half hour drive - can't stand it when I'm late - others (more relaxed) arrive late.
This itself is another awakening.
Really, a gathering, of like minds who are much closer to zen than I.

Well, time to start the process filling the buckets with honey, water, get the yeast ready...

mix it thoroughly as more arrive.
Start the racking process, calm down, share your methods with friends.

Share your mead with friends, and, of course, partake of theirs...

"Yeah Greg, I have extra yeast packets".

Ashes start falling from the sky.

Ah, the fire must be going out back.

"Hey Stacy, try this Oktoberfest I've got".

"How did you like the BFB Competition?".

"It was awesome! Got to know some judges".

"I think I can do it. Get certified".

"Yeah, Tommy wants to be a judge too".

Really, who wouldn't want to do it?

Be a competent beer & mead judge.

As the afternoon wanes, stories begin.

Stories about those no longer with us and all of the things that they did.

Larry and his hot peppers, the guy that made the best stouts...

"Check out this Flemish ale. It's good!".

Paul starts laughing at the jokes.

His wife constantly rolling her eyes.

All the guys laughing, hysterically.

Our host, thanks us for his new career at the local brewery. "It's because of y'all".

I think his words slurred a little there.

It was a great brewing event, though, as some start loading their ferments and finding their ways back home.

The sky is greyer than it was earlier and the cold night is approaching.

My trip home is quiet and calm.

But this was a day I will fondly look back on and these newly made batches of mead will ensure all of the stories yet to come.

What did you say?

It all feels so empty, and not much more.
Certainly not less.

How do you make that profound feeling sound profound when your feet are still on the ground?

Obviously you are not empty at all.
You're still alive, and that merits content.

But, if never found is the profound, as the endless wheel spins around, and around, and around, how can a life be sound?

You're alive you fool!
Food, water, shelter - the amenities abound.

'Abound'! You're starting to sound like me, and that just should not be for one so pragmatically and satisfactorily sound.

It was I who made the declaration - firstly, foremostly, and so so certainly.
Must you be so forgetful?

Maybe, if you were profound, I would feel the resounding slap of your words, and remember the pain as I hit the ground.

But, you say you're empty.
You say somethings missing, as if you're broken somehow.

No, Mr. Profound, you said that, as if you've found a resounding truth with your hounddog determination - just to bring me down.

Ah, but down you are,

and with you I will be until a path is found.

Waiting for the Storm

It was always an escape for me - menacing, dark, power.
The rolling cloud at the fore.
The 70's, when Lennon was shot, the bus stop, Iran, hostages, but evening storms, I wanted more.
There would be frogs gathering in the hundreds.
I would witness the swarm.
Adulthood, hurricanes, damage - you'd find me wandering in the eye of the storms.
A sentence received for life.
To ever feel the winds, bear the losses, the turmoil.
And yet still, a fascination with the ominous, billowing, swirling, enigmatic forms.

Veil

The ocean has a veil
In my world it is blue It hides a land beneath it One I slowly march to Another kind of veil

Is the one I wear today It's purpose is to hide me
So they cannot find my way

There is the veil I do not speak of It's words are in this script
They come from one that waited At the threshold of a crypt

Unproffered

Something so private Something so sad Something so despairing
And there you are working it Something so final Something so lost Something so painful
And you just defile it With pretty words
And pretty flowers
And pious platitudes
And things that point to you

Túatha de Ri?nap

Once, a moon, it was in shadow
And so too, the people thereof
But they, a subdued light did bestow Their moon's essence from above
As it is above, so it is below
The gentle casting we all should see When the night has taken the world When somber essence is all that be "We!", they cry from the moon above
"We cry tears of light embraced by night"
"And do give to you our sobered love"
"When painting skies in sullen white"

Trickster

How is it that I can see endings, not beginnings?
Yesterdays no longer be, only forward sendings.
Kidnapped, my peace flees amongst another's feelings.

Transitory Existence

3:00 AM

A quiet embrace in a world of chaos

Now a world of violet blue

This silence is all that is true

And a mind is awoken anew

The fabric is softly at peace

Listless

A gentle bond reluctant

To release

Drifting thoughts

To trickle off and then cease

Into velvety darkness

totally getting the neon pig

there it is again that fucked up feeling that emptiness that leaves you reeling swaying in and out of reality sailing on a mountainous wave in an ocean of ice be brave, be brave for there have been those before you who made the journey who made a life and though they wavered, continued
continued

it was never going to be easy you tell yourself easy, easy enough to drop the fear into the void that chasm always so near waiting, waiting an end you so fear to face loosing all that is dear where is the grace in that place hollowed pinnacle of the spine lost to time
lost to time

dwindling shrinking into the background of vice no dignity, nothing of the kind so where is the sign it's the pig that you are that has brought you this far into a time, to a neon line you can follow in the darkness of your mind a place to accept to accept

to accept

Tools of the Trade

Power over you, your life, everything Cry for my cause, cover my crimes Unelected like you, the rôle of tyranny
I loiter for war, and perform my mimes

Pressure your leaders to add blood to blood Deceive your people in all that is true For I bring you lines to smother and flood To confuse and betray as my con ensues

Oh voice of the world, I know you'll obey I can hear in your stance, see your attire
The words you say, and so proudly display That give me such joy as they rise ever higher

For I am exactly like you, a tool of the trade, a mask to perform in,
and a consulate liar.

To Bide as a Child

Do what you're told Respect those old
No matter how hard they hurt you You left me broke So you'll wear a yoke
As long as I control you No matter that I hate And cheated your fate
I am now going to break you You, who's the bane of my life
You, who gets to bear my strife As none other ever would, ever could But you
Oh you Well, you really should I know all things
And the sickness it brings As I lash at you, and I strike
I know the fiends
And the switch-like stings You'll endure, and remember all your life I'll break you, you hear I'll break you my dear
For you, after all, are mine

A mine in a field
That will no more yield After everything was said and done A field was the deal When things became real And freedom was ultimately won To steal a youth's zeal
So he can no longer feel

Seasons and reasons to be young But never cross that line
You may find a long lost mine That forever waited to explode
I got back what was mine Broken pieces, did I find Shards and slivers to hold I paid a great fine
In that field was the line Where the young became so very old

Time

The thing we can only experience in a forward motion but given the ability to view it in a backwards seat

Once it will be and once you will see of the possibilities

What is the crime of time, because we surely need to blame the thing that has bound us all, that has locked us in this plane

The lonely seat to view the game with no repeat

Pay attention, for you'll see it only just once Once, for the lesson, once for the hope and, if you are cynical, once for the punchline...

tides

how do you know these things you know when your gut tells you where to go and you see the patterns begin to form and you see streams begin to flow and the tide begins to go an opposite and different road everything seems to fall in place everyone seems to pick up pace every day when you see a face begin to lose its pride as if there's not a guide to hesitate to lose a stride they slowly fade from your world as if they flee the periphery of your mind a tide to reside upon a throne soon it will all be gone

They

They who bring me so many wars When war is what I want no more

I must watch what They will do For pain is what They send me to

They will never give me peace Their provocations never cease

But some things, They can never sway
And that is what I'm here to say

For They have sought me all my life Beat me down with endless strife

In everything, I've seen it through Comprehending what They do

So selfish, do They seem to me Greed consumes them so easily

And I will quietly watch them fall They ... on their knees before us all

They'll beg forgiveness of their crimes
In their frenzied, broken, twisted minds

But a knife awaits, that They will use If naively, I accept their ruse

Know this oh wretched, selfish thief Your ruling days, They be but brief

For time is always on my side And forever can They not reside

There's No Comfort In Destiny

So now here we are And exactly how far Is it we have come

Is this the right place Surely it has to be I can tell by the angst

Well, we knew, didn't we Was it not manifested So very very long ago

But what a path it has been The whole world traversed Time thoroughly dispersed

Completely to the wind But, again, we always knew Where destiny would send

The World Never Wanted You, and Neither Did She

It's easy to see it when you're alone, being stoned, condemned, dethroned from a chair you never owned in a world you never condoned, as if you ever could control anything at all.

Cast away, as judgemental stones make you moan, scream for your broken bones.
Snapping, creaking, cracking as your sobs drone on and on and on.
Wishing, wanting it all to crumble, to fall.

And that's where it begins, when the pain and the loss, sends a message you must face; tells you to, "know your place" and from it's pit beg and crawl, for you were never wanted at all.

So the story, it changes, right?
When you get off your knees and fight, and rage against your gifted plight, and those who delivered it to you night after night after night, enthralled by the suffering, the blight etched, written, carved with spite into your lonely soul. You take control with a hope that might, just might give you a chance to undo it all.

That's when she lures you into her sights and takes away your might, so you can no longer fight.

In spite, she took you by the balls, then pushed you into free fall.

And that is where it ends, right?
When she sends you to your doom encases you in the tomb she built for you,
the one destined to be filled by you way, way, way too soon.
The World should be appalled, but,

again,

you were never wanted - at all.

The Third Way

Benito, your legacy has not been forgotten.
Stir the workers, stir the masses.
Take the hope from all the classes.
Cinch the rope, but give them passes until Il Duce, The Great, amasses enough corporate skills with spyglasses to find the ones, those doomed to gasses.

You'll merge the two, won't you?
Those who employ, controlled by you, those employed, brought low by you, but they'll never see it true, for you, Il Duce, Oh Sweet One, they'll come to you with tribute, and hope, and everything due - for none could be as shrewd as you.

And none could be as blind as they.
They'll take the shot, they will obey, and pay, and pay, and pay, and pay with all they have, they'll give the state, and in dismay, they may yet stay your vassals to your corporate play - all in wake of war you'll make.

For war is all you really know.
In throes of green, and flows of greed, you know the need to bring all low, and so it goes that guns will go to all of those of whom you hold, who took the shot and sought to know the throes of death on bloody knolls.

But all is well for those who sell the ones most weak, who cannot tell of the hell they endure, and there they dwell - licentious hell, horrendous hell.

The hopeless yells, you know so well.
The cries and tolls of a lonely bell that wails of a corporate death knell.

The flag, it flies, in lurid skies behind the lies on missile sides, to take your pride to those who die.
And those who die will change the tide when those who live do take a side to see an end to a corporate ride where you preside in suicide.

And so it goes, as history flows, and flows through endless throes of human woes, and grievous tolls, and lessons lost by those who chose to forget the cost of selfish foes who flippantly tossed it all away.
Corporate minded fiends...

who lost the way.

The Strange Consequences of the Modern Age

It was a steady buzzing For all of a month
The fog continued for two Really a minor thing

As breathing was the focus For a very long time

All of the hair falling out As you're eaten alive On a breathing machine

But life slowly resumes Back into the groove Recovery

Then the quick bursts come Sudden electrical jolts
The buzzing in the brain

What a strangely wretched thing Is Long COVID-19
Who knows if it will end

The Night

Hooded with an inside of black, lack of light, remiss of enlightenment Shadows unrevealed by candlelight, waring to remain free from discovery Concealing whatever can remain in the envelope of secrecy Sleep becomes the archetypal blueprint of the void of sight Dreams filling the emptiness, the quiet that has married the night Dreams can only rise from the depths of the void that is not as empty as it seems The Night becomes comfort, becomes free in it's dance with reality

The Modern Era

Naught but fallacies Naught but fantasies Naught but everything aside from realities!

Super-Powers? I Would Be The Greenman!

While green in every aspect Except the political, you see Manipulation of the plant world Would my twining talents be You might think that that is stupid Not knowing how deadly plants can be
And I would make use of the worst Like Datura metel or the Rosary Pea
As the loathsome foe thinks he is safe Having escaped the likes of me My friendly Euphorbia will release Asphyxiating pollen - abundantly
But my friends don't have to be exotic
To catch the evil ones that flee A pine tree abscising its branches On those below is quite deadly So if you still think I am stupid Don't smell the roses you see For deep inside is my venom
The rose is just delivery

Stormy

I hear you coming, oh storm Anger rumbles on your breath
The air swirls and tears apart Irreverently seeking death Flashes show a stark landscape Unnatural bluish light
A world shocked by your power And frozen by your great might Torrents fall ever downward A world beaten by your hate And regardless what we do Your judgement will not sate When you've left us far behind In a world that is so cold We wrap ourselves in reverence Trudging onward in your hold

spin the black circle

words of pain, words of loss tossed onto a page, on earth feelings arranged, injected poured into characters rehearsed day, after day, after day, only to be remade re-versed into a song of sorrow mesmerizing those who hear captivating those who fear the truth so stark, the night so dark inevitability, tomorrow to see the words revolve around and around the source eddie's that flow and swirl melodic whirlwinds on course emotional force that comes with what was poured into the characters that soar through the vortex of space so that our race can hear the cry when the needle touches the sky before Inevitability

Somnolent Struggle

What a quiet night it is With my isolated thoughts Sleep pulls at my cognizance Wanting to take it away

A slight ache around the hip
As my youth has now been lost To the travails of the past And long laborious days

The cold may try to reach me
With its brittle claws of frost
But this present state of warmth Will surely keep them at bay

A fleeting moment this is Aimless feelings getting tossed And rearranged to create Something lucid for this page

Sleepy Shadows

Shadow on the roof across the street
An apparition I've no wish to meet Why do you stare with eyes ablaze Why do you quicken my heart beat As the moon shines in the thickening haze Close the windows and bolt the door Stop this fiend from days of yore From reaching my sanctum so replete In safety and peace abundantly stored
-So that I may have a restful sleep Hammering door can't take much more
As I brace my feet upon the floor With all my might - an epic feat
I lunge myself against the door Slinging myself from out of sleep & wrestling a specter that is no more

Sixty Taps in an Olde Swamp

"I went to this place - they have all kinds of beer!"
"They have more than y'all do", says the drunk beside.
Rather boastful, I think, for a swill swigging rookie.
He probably just wandered blindly in here.

"Hey what's that cocktail I like?", says another.
"Yeah, that one! The one with the German blonde!"
At least he knew what a blonde was and where they come from.
Still, he's fouling something pure with another liqueur.

Baseball, golf, and racing - all that matters now in this former stale swamp of La Florida.
They're broadcast on every screen, and there are thirteen.
Thirteen ways to get lost, fourteen, if you count the beer.

Talking Heads in the background, "same as it ever was, same as it ever was, same as it ever..."
Why am I writing this, "... you may ask yourself"?
I have "found myself" drinking in a Talking Heads song.

Oh, I just discovered another way to escape.
It seems there are fifteen ways to do it here;
I can be a "traveler of all time and space"
And "talk in tongues of lilting grace" with Robert's 'Kashmir'.

The thing I've just realized, ... it's so easy to get lost and become oblivious here surrounded by the gossiping swamp I find so dear.
This bubbling stale morass that, to my heart, is so near.

Single Sigma Empath Acquiescence

Friday afternoon and one drink down
It was supposed to be a lager
But the smiling waitress can't tell a beer from a cider

Had to come here and leave my home quickly After witnessing the haphazard lawn guy
And his murderous weed eater rampage

The television wasn't helping either Angry women faces demanding death And promising nights of destruction & violence

Plus a call from an employee and his multiple "No's"
So forgetful of the meaning of rank & service Except, of course, to his tyrant at home

"Beer is bad for you", the doctor in my head is saying Too bad I can't seem to acquire one at this bar And defy the expectations of his expensive advice

Hmm ... maybe I can make it easy for the bartender And for that matter, all of the rest "Cheers to the modern age! Another cider please!"

Sigmatic War

When weary of shadows
And their horrid touch I declare my war against such

To switch on the light
For all that can see And reveal the darkened ones that be

They run to the corners
They hide their eyes
And fear a slow stark demise

For I have now had it I no longer care
For their panic stricken stares

Sigmatic Lament

Why does the rain and the storms call me so Why do I yearn for their presence Am I recharged, do I just need it For the strength, for the power inside

I can't plug in to this society anymore
I can't relate to the lacking in this world Am I the alien now, do I no longer belong A quietly fading remnant of the past

I've been watching, and wanting I've been hoping, and pleading for it A great storm, turbulence, torrents To remind me of the fortitude that once was

The awe of a rolling grey cloud
The wash of cold air flowing Stark flashes of raw energy And the crashing aftermath of sound

It's all I have left amongst these ruins It's all that I can hold in reverence Against the backdrop of absurdism
Of a dying system, that once was the storm

I don't need to prevent it, to stop it I don't need to run from it's ferocity
I just need to be in it's presence Overwhelmed by, and grateful for

It's really the condition of a now empty world It's really my reaction to those embracing it To those foundation-less inheritors

Of the once, and of the future

Sigma Surface Mindset - Response

Liminal. A new word for me, actually (not being a student of formal psychology). Limbo is where I have been for a long time. Many times. It's almost accepted now.

So here we go.

How can there not be an absolute state? I will live. I will die. There will be happiness and sorrow, whether I want it or not. In my way of processing the world around me, either the light or the dark will prevail, again, whether I want it or not. So where do I fit into that scheme? The world doesn't care. Certain people do, but in general, nah.

I've adopted a certain flow, and like you said, it is very painful and very free. It's that dance that Mr. Gill referred to. You teeter on the edge. You know you can go either way very easily, but you choose to keep your balance as best you can. Then comes the vector. It hits you, knocks you off balance, leaves you hanging in liminal space, right? You didn't see it coming. It shouldn't have come, at least you don't think so - that's the fantasy! There are lessons to be learned, though. I've faced death at least four times in my life. After each encounter, I managed to come out on the other side (I think), mainly by fiat, but you're never the same person - that's the reality.

This is a metaphysical topic. If you're trying to find the reasons for existence. The reasons for survival, after survival, after survival. You have to turn to something. Something grander than everything you've ever experienced. I did that. Eight years of devout dedication, only to find another vector (again, fantasy vs reality). Then you get up again, and realize what you've been divorced from. Anathema is a good word. That was one of the worst encounters with death. Betrayal, hatred, and neglect in a place it never should have been (fantasy). It'll leave you broken.

So after personal testimony, and confession, you do what you are able to do, and you do it well. Friends, family will come and go, but someone always seems to be there to wittingly or unwittingly help carry the load.

Light shines again (reality?), which makes me believe in absolutes again. I have to know/understand both good and evil just like everyone else. You try to find the flawed friends - the one's where the 'concern for others' outweighs the selfish tendencies. They're actually easy to spot. If you look for the right thing.

Reminiscing Runaway

White was the wedding in Idol's dream

Punked were the girls in a school bus scene

High school days that were so long ago
Old memories of a broken teen

So weary of it all, he was then Now, considering what could have been Long years in a swamp - pinned to the ground
By hateful, abusive, evil kin

Duran Duran were reaching their peak
New music would he soon have to seek
But not there in the bubbling morass
To other grounds, he would have to sneak

Distant coasts, where the sands were so white
That is where he would soon take the fight
To live a real life and to be free
Never again, a whippoorwill night

Songs were a way to ditch what had been Soon Eddie and Layne would take him in A path that he never thought could be Cool crowds, long hair, bonfires, shark fins

Night on the beach would always be home
In all the places that he would roam
His feet in the shimmering white sands
Thinking of days that are long since gone

That's the current state of things. It can change on a dime, but if you survive it all, was in not absolute? That's how I see the world I live in. They're all encounters, both good and bad, that end up forming you into something you would never have dreamed of early on. It has always been about the end result. Something you can't even see unless you look back.

As far as nazis are concerned, there will always be a vector. Let's just hope the lessons can be learned and that previous lessons can be remembered.

Sigma Surface Mindset

It's a very mellow Oktoberfest-first-day at Dunderbaks. Me & maybe two others at the bar. I want to debate someone on Ren's Discord, but I don't care about the current topics - racism, antifa, and nazis. I've been dreading and evading those things for years. I know the debate won't be productive for me in any way. I thought about throwing my 'Peregrination' poem in the mix to spark My kind of debate, but decided not to.

[Peregrination

If you accept a concept
Do you become subject to it Does fantasy become your home
Or does fantasy become real

When you are cast from there
Are you no longer subject to it Does reality become your new home
In your moments of despair

What if you belong to neither Subject to nothing at all
Now there is a place to reside
Where worlds no longer care]

I can tell by the current discussions in 'Discussions' that they'll never see or hear anything I'm trying to say. (Maybe I'll do a rauchbier and reconsider. Hey, someone just received their jägerschnitzel. Yes.)

A bum got mad at the world because I had no cash on the way in. I thought about getting some cash to give to him on the way out, but I don't know if I should - there's a hundred ways to look at that too.

Soccer is currently playing on the bar screen - some kind of Turkish league I understand, but soccer is so boring to me. Yeah, I'm definitely doing an Aecht Schlenkerla after the märzen - a strong one. Sounds like they have an 'oak' smoked version. Awesome!

Actually, it's kinda subtle, but beautiful. I always imagine gatherings of cool people, BBQ, and nighttime cold air when I drink a rauchbier. Viva Oktoberfest! Fall is coming! I can hear the crackling of the fire, imagine what's rummaging around in the woods, hear the discussions in the circle.

But back to text message reality. Jeremy was rear-ended on a trip to Alabama, Joe had to work, Tyson & Ryann are attending another event (something I was supposed to attend too). Mike & Tim? Out living the life, I'm sure. So it's just me, my pub, my bier. I could think of something deep to write a poem about, but something told me to do this instead, and for what it's worth, I don't know, maybe this can mean something too.

But things don't seem to mean as much anymore. Been struggling with that a little, here lately. Could have something to do with aging, but the world is not the same. Even though we're all in this together, we're not in this together. You can see the division, and nazis notwithstanding, they are no less than anything else that is crazy and is going on right now. Everyone is RIGHT, and as Sting once wrote, "I don't subscribe to that point of view. It would be such an ignorant thing to do...". Music, somehow, brings us together, but is it only temporary? If we quit listening to the song, do we go right back to the mud? Some have said that it will take a great tragedy to bring us together. I think that's true, but our tragedies have been flippant at best. The fact that we just went through a pandemic where millions died - it really had no effect on the outlook for mankind.

Greg texted me just now. Said to come to Grove Roots and try Brian's new quad that's on tap. He'll yeah, on my way. As I leave, there's no bum. I actually have a 20 spot to give him. Maybe it was fate. Maybe it was late. I certainly hope it wasn't cruel, but the world is not the same anymore. He might've been a player. Don't know.

The ride was awesome. Boston's 'Foreplay' & 'Long Time' came across Sirius's 'Classics' station. Hit repeat on that! Heard some Sting, some Tesla, and Eddie. Pearl Jam will always be close to me in some way. I wonder if I would actually like Eddie as a person? His political accusations drive me nuts, but there's something about his music that pulls at me. His music did help me get through some deadly times in the distant past, but you create these personas in your head that you like. Probably a set up, just to be let down. I hope not, though.

Everybody's here. Guess I came to the right place. It's packed! Hey, Alex is working here now. There's Dee! Let me get Brian's Belgian. It's so good. A little heavy on the malts, but good. I see their Oktoberfest-Märzen listed. I'll get that next so as not to be sacrilegious. "Hey Brian, your Quad is good!!", "Is anyone sitting here Greg?".

It felt good to walk in to a place where everyone knows you. I can hear the old Cheers theme song from years ago. Brian's retired now, has plenty of time to make beer with Paul and the gang. I may have to start coming here more often. They just don't have the reubens & the Haaker Pschorrs I love so much at my German pub. Choices. Maybe it's good that I found no debate to get involved in today because, again, I don't think anyone would get it, and my homies have severely distracted me ... no, no, it's not the beer. So, here's to Oktoberfest, märzenbier, reubens, friends & rants!

Prost!!

Shaun

Once again, the death of another friend Picture the scene, if you can A blue tent with a clear blue sky
A faint sunlit moon slowly descending behind A tree and a small blue crowd Shaun is free
No more constraints, no more pain
But he'll never again get to see the rain Hear musical notes climb and descend This world will just continue blind to this end to this sobering moment in time We never got to have that beer and discuss the book I never got to hear where in your mind it took If you could relate as I once did To that one poem inside
"I remember friends from wars, all but we forgot All of them distilled into each wound we caught Those wounds were all the painful places where we fought Battles better left behind, ones we never sought What is it that we spent, and what was it we bought" ~ F. Herbert It's kinda like that, you know Born into the craziness of this world To be brought low Again and again
But you, my friend, I would defend If I were now able Everything we know, it just ends
And, if you're lucky, you become a fable That so rarely happens though I will remember you Shaun, and all the times we would just spend talking at a table

shadow ii

and so it was he came to know himself from the paths he followed, the places he slept the respite created, the barriers he laid for none could enter without his blessing lest all that he had created be undone and even still he admitted those who would betray who would take what was given only to hurl away everything

thus he is what he is today of lessons learned before the grave humans are destined to be a dichotomy the good the bad and all the details between could it be better to just remain unseen

shadow

my shadow cast across the sands of a place that used to be one shadow, one sun, one place by the sea but hasn't it always been this way a life based on illusions that this world had to bring a forward stance, a hope, a song that I must sing to fall into niches of circumstance, to learn lessons of loss, hatred, deceit and discover the ways of this world perpetually stuck on repeat it just keeps going tick, tick, tick, tick sands flowing, none knowing the end of the lonely road rocks, the keepers of time holding the distant past slowly eroding, no hope just going, forward, tick, tick, tick counting hours, years, eons, just going on and on, laying on an unseen fabric held beautifully, cradled delicately, but eroding never knowing, always going, never knowing i stare at the sands of time at a place that used to be beneath a fading shadow, and a setting sun may the sands find their peace

scene two

It was a call that pulled him tugged at him, wanted him to leave the veil leave the threshold and follow the trail forsake the gales that troubled his home start the journey into the tale that he would ultimately become, into the unknown tales of paths and trails thats lead to what will be who can know what prevails when the world comes off the rails in time you will see journeys start off in the most mundane of ways sometimes because of troubled days sometimes because of what it weighs but more often than not, it's the cards you have to play as the world goes up in flames and so it was done, the decision was made he would do what destiny bade his path was laid across the world it would be soon this world, he would see

*Paths, there are so many of you but you always snake your way to a place where a debt is due that never relents, always pursues
...until it finds you*

So he leaves his night time veil to follow a forlorn trail against the gales, and towards the wails of a long lost humanity that derailed from the tracks because of the hacks who ultimately prevailed

The hacks stayed, never went away There was no way they would go away for how could they stay the hand of correction How could they betray all to destruction eradication, extermination, annihilation

When the end does greet us all At the hands of those who hate May the ones exempt from laws Never arrive when too late Lest the beasts fill their plates

That's when he noticed that something was wrong
As he traveled his certain path
There was wrath in the eyes of the foe Ahead, in the line he had to go, you know trouble standing straight ahead in the road

scene one

There was a feeling of oppression looming as he walked through the midnight wood. Wind was blowing, branches falling, not far from where he stood. Lost in thought, the Night was covering all with his visionless hood.

Night, with your deep dark veil hiding things we must not see I trust that when you finally set sail you'll return yet again and cover me

The storms came frequently now to his solitary place. Always a reminder of the weight that he bore, always a reminder of what lay in store, for those who found themselves here at Death's lonely door - here where he had always understood so very much more.

Fire was the answer, for it came from within. On a long ago day, he knew Life could only end. He knew this by the gifts Life would continually send to him. It was then he had chosen to quietly blend in until his exile's end - until the day he would stand on sunlit ground with the words he would ultimately send. It was on that day so so long ago, that the Fire had spoken to him, "Go! Never turn back, never, never give in".

He wasn't dying, though he lived on the threshold of things that are gone - at least, not dying as of yet. It was here that he had found his home - the wind, and the gloom notwithstanding. It was here that he would hone his resistance to Life's society, to lies, to just about everything - here, on his own, alone.

It was the fire within that sustained. Like a burning hearth on an ice cold night, or a sojourn down a long lost path by candlelight. Something that was longed for, something to prove, something to enduringly complete that this world never knew, something true.

Path, after path, after path, it had been a long long time. The temptations, the losses, the persecutions of the past. Like tendrils, grasping, reaching for a soul they would bind. Of the one on the run, that they must find. The one unaligned, never part of the vine. But something has now changed. The branches falling told of a world marching to his threshold. A world frantically running out of time.

*Oh Time, how you hunt me so Your pulling ropes tug at my soul
What more is it that I must know Before you drag me to the final goal*

Salience

That feeling of separation In a moment
In a twinkling
As the glow of the outside sneaks in

The rawness of sensation Instilled within Observed again
To be recalled forever, without end

Is this romance a reflection To be kept
To be mourned Before the next hour begins

A fleeting impression Significant Omnipotent
Connected to a silence, awoken

Ropes, Possessive Women, Covid Shots & Sand

Monday

Met with a friend

Was a friend

Can't be a friend

Not a friend

We talked about fellow friends

No longer with

Tragedies

Victims of themselves

One believed the end was a means

One believed in needles, it seems

All fell victim to what was right

Not right

We were all together once

Living, free, the only way to be

But then there were shackles of choice

Each enslavement with a singular voice

Then the hourglass ran out

The links spread out

About

So thin

And then, where were the friends

As a Lizard King once said

"It hurts to set you free..."

Now

Before me

Is a sandy dune

Higher than it once was

In those days you could peer over it

And see the ocean waves

And see the friendly waves

But storms pile the sands high

To bury everything below
If you watch You'll come to know Solo
So low
When wind comes again
And time skitters and flows What will be revealed From below

Romantic Interlude

A feeling of respite Amidst the green blades so true Calming, swaying movement
As I think only of you
The breeze blowing lightly
In a garden where I muse
How it is you can defeat me With your methods of abuse Flower petals now falling To the ground where they will fuse Into everything that is wilting In this person you rebuke With words that dig so deeply Meant only ... to confuse And lead me to destruction Where my remnants may be used To feed a hungry garden With your bitter bitter food

Riddle II

When a volcano's winter cold
And the remittance men of old

No longer provide their sway Their ghost town will decay

But that is just as well
For ghosts will never tell

What it is that they must hide About Templar secret pride

Their trove you cannot know Hidden somewhere down below

And what answers you may seek Will leave your future bleak

For seekers are ever blocked From great secrets inter-laced

Riddle

In the 1500's, an island meeting place
That in the 1800's, will leave no trace

For time and its ever changing face With maps, hide this gathering space

Templars corralled on a high dry band Will travel east and play in the sand

The curse from afar that will empty this land Then yet, once again, must its patrons disband

For betwixt the lakes, not the roiling seas Does the Templar standard mark its deeds

One lach becomes two, or so it seems Inter the hunters and their endless schemes

Rhythmic Beeps & Bloodstained Sheets

Does a corporation live?
Is it not a death enveloping the whole world?

Yes, you can make your own stand on the ground you have, under the tread of your feet.

But do you truly understand?
Ascertain their mindless needs, as slowly, their greed makes them bleed.
Their bloated vision exceeds any form of decency - of sobriety.
Really, they are already dead.
Dead, I say - dead to responsibility.

Did I say, "You can be free!"?
It's really easy.
End your reliance, sucede!

You can be what you should be On your holy ground under an open sky, free.

Because of that, you will no longer need anything they could ever provide you with, supply you with, bribe you with - their money.
To be free of that is what makes them dead, and dead they will be, free you will be.
Relying no more on their slavery.
Dying no more with them - under penalty.

Does a corporation live?

Is it not a death
enveloping your whole world?

Revolving Door

The pulling strings Attached to my soul
My wards are no match
I have no control
To give in to it Fall into that hole Swallowed in darkness
Oh pitiful soul
To reap it's reward Be filled with its joy
A moment to sate It's intended ploy
A lure to a trap
That seeks to destroy The hope I have left A torn ragged toy Releasing it's grip
On my battered soul
I climb to the light
From out of the hole Into a new world
With hopes of control Until the bell rings
The toll of my soul

Ren Gill III, Part I - Blurred Vision

Herein lies a story of one who endured all things pain, and all that it brings, only to lay down in script the words he now sings - sings to us all. Words that bring relief from the ague, from the age, and show him as the gauge he now is. His words describe the world of the lost. They bring to the fore the weight, and the cost, and show us the treasures that are so often tossed into eternity.

Herein lies a gem etched by sand, and rough like the hand of one who labors, of one who understands what life does demand as his words jettison and expand into immortality.

And so we begin a tale impacted by one who never fails to grace us with his everlasting harmony.

Part I

Blurred Vision

Awkward was the introduction of a man in a gown. You see, I'm old and optical acuity, well, it's been steadily going down. I didn't recognize that the man was suffering. I didn't recognize the individual as the most profound anomaly I could have ever found.

It had been two years since the plague took me to a world manmade, to a place of ill fate where I could solitarily fade from humanity. It had been another date with destiny, another embrace from finality, another threat from catastrophe. It was followed by a once dismissed symphony, a once remissed (by me) cacophony of lonely sounds from one Jeff Buckley - a tragedy I could relate to as death had never been strange ... to me. I had been focused relentlessly on his story, only to acknowledge shamefully, what he could not - a certainty that I will age yet more.

And then the gown. I should have recognized it, right? But to my sight, I saw another strike, another punch to the right. There it was, blurred on a little screen, another man in a dress, another political address, another statement to stress about modernity. It was January. The worldly parade did advance with its political stance, and a militaristic stride that it would not hide. Then it was the ides of March, and March it was when I said, "That's not a dress!".

For you see, it would not go away. It came back every day when I looked for sadness to relate to. My painful lungs still did not obey the needs of a man to break free from the fray, to take hold of the day, with a clear mind that could cling to ... something solid. So I caved and hit play for the man in the hospital gown and was ready (I thought) for the road it might take me down.

"I've been taking some time to be distant

I've been taking some time to be still" ~ Hi Ren, Ren Gill

"Your civilian mind is so perfect at always being lied to Okay, take another pill, boy Drown yourself in the sound of white noise Follow this 10 step program, rejoice!
All your problems will be gone! Fucking dumb boy" ~ Hi Ren, Ren Gill

The tears that flowed came from a place that this Ren fellow knows. It was unnatural for me to find myself in these throes. Not since I fled my childhood had I found myself completely lost again on this lonely road. His eyes made contact, set back, hollow. Mine blurred again. Tears, torn from a life full of sorrow.

"And I couldn't awake from the nightmare, that sucked me in and pulled me under Pulled me under, oh

Oh, that was so real
Oh, that was so real
Oh, that was so real" ~ So Real, Jeff Buckley

Again, I watched.
Again,
again,
and more just poured out. There was no more doubt how much had been endured. Where had this Ren been for my eternity? And to where, would his music send? For, like, and unlike Ren, my words did never ascend to a place of healing. The inward pain became somewhat poetic. Just enough to retain some self, some feeling, but the openness was not allowed. I never stood before a crowd. Maybe now...

Ren Gill II

Ren sees the world in Fibonacci Sequences and Double Dutch.

I've thought about that very much and still try to clutch the idea that my whole world can be seen differently, and that the touch of another's thoughts could change it all, such as my outlook has done.

I can feel the pain and the loss, and know the feeling of being tossed out to the cold cold frost of a world so very lost - a permanent winter where ice is the cost that you must pay.
And there you will stay until the Boss has sealed the day that you'll become little more than blowing dross.

But the way that you go through the frost and the snow will determine whether people know that you were once here. And the rate that you grow will also let them know that you were here to prevail in a boat riding the ocean flows, assailed by the beasts and the winds and the shoals of a life on the brink.

It really makes you think, and I'm glad to say that the talent of this man can stay the pain, and show me the way to overcome, crawl back from the brink, and land in a world of stability.
It all comes down to your ability to jettison dismay, and from it's clutches, belay the end.

Ren Gill

and then the prodigy arrives with his very human stance determined to overcome all in an ever hopeful dance reflective of all of our pain yet he still takes his chance and opens a communal heart to a universal expanse broader than his meaningful words is care for another, enhanced

Reminiscing Runaway

White was the wedding in Idol's dream
Punked were the girls in a school bus scene
High school days that were so long ago
Old memories of a broken teen
So weary of it all, he was then
Now, considering what could have been Long years in a swamp - pinned to the ground
By hateful, abusive, evil kin
Duran Duran were reaching their peak
New music would he soon have to seek
But not there in the bubbling morass
To other grounds, he would have to sneak
Distant coasts, where the sands were so white
That is where he would soon take the fight
To live a real life and to be free
Never again, a whippoorwill night
Songs were a way to ditch what had been
Soon Eddie and Layne would take him in
A path that he never thought could be
Cool crowds, long hair, bonfires, shark fins
Night on the beach would always be home
In all the places that he would roam
His feet in the shimmering white sands
Thinking of days that are long since gone

Regulatory Musings

Safely must you conduct yourself And I will be watching it all You cannot make any mistakes Or you will most assuredly fall
To my newfound role in your life Of oversight, controls and walls
I will regulate your every step And attempt to cut off your balls
I am an almighty power Whose been given reign over all You will submit or you will pay With your life when I make the call I will destroy your callous ways
As I greedily take it all For my ways are of SAFETY And your life means nothing at all

Quiet Mysteries

Spent
On the floor Breathe

What is it Existence
To be

Silence
All around
My breath

Look Detritus
I see

Of all the things That be
For me

None can know Silence
As do I

None can touch
My place
Or know why

I live among The detritus
Of my life

Quaff

Observing your curves that seduce my soul Wondering what may be hidden inside Your silky wetness is my only goal
A euphoric place in which to reside
The promises you whisper to lure me Will thrust us forward in this fervent ride Your fluid embrace will leave me yearning For the crescendo of this rising tide I'll take everything you will afford me Upon your curves, my greedy hands will glide I'll drink you and consume your sweet repute
And when you are gone, will I sadly sigh

Portents VIII

a shostakovich morning this is the dew is dripping from a nepenthes as it holds a cache of unlucky ones those who fell into the trap those who could not return to partake of another mourning another lamentation of the present age there will be dark clouds later shrouding a horizon depleted of light covering a world that no longer needs it snares accurate in their marching timbre loud sharp before the lightning strikes before the waltz the dance of war discordance reigns supreme with its frenzy its mania its desperation torrents of painful notes fall from the sky stinging those who try to pass by pain madness as blood rules with might the life in a raging river as it washes all away just another day in this somber play

Portents VII

down in the meadows where i once saw a man a tarnished, soulless, soul of a man he begged for no mercy did not reach for a hand content just to be, just where he stands the grasses were waving in the cold winter wind a solitary being in a lonely land the world cannot see him but the meadows can as wind only lends it's biting hand i saw and i wondered what makes one a man when one is forgotten and returns to the sand i will not reach for him and he will not demand exodus from his wind bitten land

Portents VI

resplendent is the hate you call love evident in every corner of the world giving strength to killers and their ilk illustrious, excelentíssimo, glorious moving nations into squares, positioning interference as an artifice of light never regretting what you've rendered black inking the rivers and oceans with blood marching throughout the generations intelligentsia at every core leading wisdom to the pit inquisition, anathema, maledictiones to those who ever would dare a question that might lead in err notions of truth, you cannot bear to be answered, to be seen in the presence of all that be sights that are forever unclean eternal are the lies to abhor centered in the notions of self cloistered in the darkness of yore lustful of what is not correct estranged like a wrinkled whore standing on an empty street in thought of what lay in store after the vile and filthy deeds end in loss and what can be no more

Portents V

Grains of sand blow across my land
As I seek a full understanding Stings garnered by incessant winds Scour away my surroundings A world, desolate and stripped The old ways, all of our foundings Weathered, worn, and indelible
With lonely, longing words confounding Our modern, sandy, translucent age So pitted with holes - abounding As it all weathers slowly away A scene, that once would be astounding

portents ix

the days are getting darker the dread has made it's claim to my wearied and forlorn mind i stand on the shore again, old looking across the choppy waters wondering of the lands beyond of building storms coming from their shores there is no doubt in this you can feel the chill the change, the power will it behoove us to gather the stores or have we given them all away human pettiness, irrelevant details are all that seem to remain when the fore-cloud of the future envelopes the whole of mankind will there be wonder, contemplation or shivering bundles in dark corners waiting how long have i been waiting

Portents IV

You know that space in between When everything's about to change When states will soon be opposed And hesitation is not yet abandoned

The moment after the flash
When you realize you're alive When you're counting the seconds Before everyone takes notice

That stunned place of silence
When the performance is over When the emotions are gathering And the silence can be no more

Some say, "The breath before the plunge"
"The calm before the storm"
In this place, you must wait For the great reckoning to come

Portents III - Reprise

As society falls, and falls, and falls Into the dark depths below What will rise in the midst

As freedom receives its final blow An omen that we so verily know Comes the final blitz

When people dance and obey Her words, her deep dark bellows So very eager to submit

Will anyone awake
And see their fellows Bound in her crushing grip

Portents III

It's a slow motion tragedy
The cars just going in one by one Obviously they cannot see A missing piece of the bridge

Such a nightmarish scene Nothing good can transpire Helplessly witnessing it all Shock, horror, realization

An obese woman rises out of the sea Worn tutu is offensively too small Her mechanical spinning movements Directing the fish to jump and dance

Why is she so ominous Performing in her oceanic ballet How is this related to the tragedy
The endless decent of the cars

The ocean is no longer welcoming My island is no longer my home Red lights are flashing urgently Is it too late to flee this scene

Eyes open in the quiet darkness With feelings foreboding
The night vision so bizarre Dread so certain, so close

Portents II

Another lonely bar table Square clean napkins & dirty IPA Forever free in my solitary way
A detritus of words around me Humanity's ever flowing minutiae Expounding everything they say I used to worry about them all Back in my youthful days
For back then I was always afraid That when it all came crashing down
In this world's most horrid ways
They would all have a heavy price to pay But what about me Where would I be in the fray Think I just found dismay in my IPA

Portents

I feel the darkness coming Ever forward in the lucid air

It is all like a feeling of a stormfront rolling on a world laid bare

I feel the sober blade falling Why is it I no longer care

Is it rest I am seeking from a world ever making all so blatantly unfair

I feel a reckoning hanging For all our peoples unaware

As the deaf keep on talking And the blind keep on walking On a path to God knows where

I know a black beast is prowling Having seen the haphazard snare

He will keep right on crawling As his pack will keep calling No more must they beware

Pointing Fingers

It's all the same, whether unknown or fame, whether rich or poor, we'll all go through the same damned door.
How many narcissists, how many fantasists refuse to see that they picked from the same damned tree, and that the sentence is 'we', not 'me',
WE!
We succumb to the very same thing that enticed us to the tree.
You know, deep down, that YOU are no different than me - with waves of greed in an endless sea.
The depths, oh blessed deeps, go back to beginnings, when all was wrong, that endless song of a treat, a very sweet treat, that cast us from our home - we did no more belong.
Sweet, sweet, treat.
Now we find our own way every day.
You could say that that it is ok, and you would - it's what I've been saying all along.
You refuse to see the tragedy that we cannot escape a decision to need all the fish in the sea, and take (all the things we can take), then try to escape our sentenced fate - a condemned state, that might be eternity!

Pink Cloud in the Sky

The sun is shining on this Pink Floyd morning Another brick in the wall of time
The moon is left screaming outside the Earth's scorching veil Walls, barriers, veils, how long can they hold Before the heat burns through Before mankind wails for mercy, for kindness Ordinary men against a diamond in a sky of sorrow Caught between stark realities and eternal hope News anchors in the background, speaking Who now only tell lies How I long for the chorus of a world sublime
Of a difference Removed from the clutches of our wretched times

Peregrination

If you accept a concept
Do you become subject to it
Does fantasy become your home
Or does fantasy become real

When you are cast from there
Are you no longer subject to it
Does reality become your new home
In your moments of despair

What if you belong to neither
Subject to nothing at all
Now there is a place to reside
Where worlds no longer care

Paul Atreides

When water was there You left

Driven by purpose Your race unaware

A tragic beginning In a tragic setting

Deliberately born
In a life unfair

To a cloud of dust Will you find rest

When the sands of humanity Can you no longer bear

Paths XVI

Have you ever found yourself at the end of the story
You know how you got there but everyone else is a spectator It's a mystery to them especially when your end is their beginning

"The program for this evening is not new You've seen this entertainment through and through You've seen your birth your life and death
You might recall all of the rest Did you have a good world when you died?
Enough to base a movie on?" ~ Jim Morrison

Paths...
And there are a lot of them (I think I've got at least 15)
There may be a few left But the paths I can relate to can they be yours to understand too I can think of a field 'Fields' play the role of distance
for me
They separate the trees from the road
The wild from the structures Fields are where things grow and they have to be crossed that is if the wilds are where you choose to go

The wilds are a dangerous place to be You know this by the creatures you meet But which is worse, the futures that are unknown or hot black pavement that burns your feet

"Oh, father of the four winds, fill my sails Across the sea of years
With no provision but an open face Along the straits of fear" ~ Led Zeppelin

I think we all kinda have to go wild at various points on the trail and distance is really all we have Forward
No turning back when we leave the veil

"The blue bus is calling us
The blue bus is calling us Driver, where you taking us?" ~ Jim Morrison

At some point you arrive
The tale has been traversed
As you look back, you inquire How could this be rehearsed How could I have survived the treachery of the forest the lands of the cursed

But the story's been told before of this, you can't deny details, they do differ

For those who choose to know to know why we live only to die

"Upon a secret journey

I met a holy man His blindness was his wisdom
I'm such a lonely man
And as the world was turning It rolled itself in pain
This does not seem to touch you He pointed to the rain
You will see light in the darkness
You will make some sense of this And when you've made your secret journey
You will find this love you miss" ~ The Police

Along my lonely trail
I too met a holy man He showed a different pathway through sterile desert sands He showed a way to separate myself, that is from the rest of the land to blow as the sand free

the only way I wanted to be

That brings us to the rain for verily it shall come and the sadness of the skies will remind you where you're from The tears from high above will drive you to the ground where gutted sobs of pain are the only songs around "In restless dreams I walked alone Narrow streets of cobblestone

'Neath the halo of a street lamp

I turned my collar to the cold and damp
When my eyes were stabbed by the flash of a neon light That split the night
And touched the sound of silence" ~ Simon & Garfunkle

That brings us to today
The place we have arrived
The future, it is here
You've been lucky You survived
You conquered wilds of yore
You found your secret space
You paid your lonely debt
You have your broken grace

Tomorrow starts a day when sun will rise above to illuminate the way on the road you've come to love but...

"There's the moon asking to stay Long enough for the clouds to fly me away Well it's my time coming, I'm not afraid, afraid to die
My fading voice sings of love But she cries to the clicking of time, oh, time" ~ Jeff Buckley spinning as if out of control forging a path of destruction it's as if chaos had taken it's hold myriads of chastisements, instruction

Paths XV

"I will take it all and watch you fall to the ground in submission you will beg, plead and call for forgiveness, absolution, but I am purgation I am the cleansing of progress, peace - reproachment I'm the commander of death's encroachment, of decay's approachment, of the creations last breath midst a swirling commotion and that is all, as it all does fall in my screaming, ripping squall of destruction" again, you play your dark role as i feel your admonishments as i cringe in the corner of a hole and wait for your accomplishments
"ha, I can feel my greatness as you reel in the sorrow of broken bones and broken homes you'll now follow a different road with your words, your tomes so hollow and I smile as I pass and see you wallow in your fallow fields I plowed you asunder, and left you to swallow the dirt of battlefields of wars I made, of days that shade, of moments that steal and leave you to wander" and wander, i will with a heavy toll down roads that have no direction and empty i'll be to the final goal with the long lost hope of redemption

Paths XIV

At first an explorer of the world around me picking wild blackberries, running the fields, playing with crowddaddies in the ditches, watching the frogs in exodus after a storm, fascinated with the green things that appealed.

Mozart would one day find me, and take me to a land so far from my start, a land devoid of my reality that only grew within my heart.
He molded a free individual who found life within, not just in the world without.

T. H. White was the one who led me deeper into the realms of a human's thoughts, into the ways of accepting my tragedies, into the freedoms of flight through history, through a kingdom, and a great king's start.

When combined with my own beginnings, down all of the paths that I would follow, a method could be derived in order to survive, endure my rivals, meet them adeptly in daily battles, and live a life not hollow.

For hollow is what it should have been.
Of that you can be sure. To have not had that world within, I would never have endured the hopelessness, the pointlessness, of a cursed and tragic life with an empty start.

Life is an interesting thing to look back upon, to analyze, to realize at the end of the trail, to understand how the world could've been,

and just how frail is the individual within.
A foundation on which to build a tale.

Paths XIII

I don't know when exactly it all changes
When the road approaches its final stop I guess it would be stressful to know it Unless, of course, you're looking forward to arriving I can see how that might be a relief to some But what if your expectations were damaged Or even worse, what if some of your hope is gone
It is a tenuous state to be in, for sure When the road is coming to a definitive end

When beginnings don't start off very well
The paths are never as straight as they should be They tend to stray, and as interesting as they may be Confusion can settle in, and certainty can be lost
At that point there can only be fate, destiny
When you're free to fall into your ultimate role And follow the road to its intended end Maybe some of that can explain the trepidation Of knowing exactly where your future will send

Paths XII

There's a point when only you can write about the things you now see, when the depths of despair are done with you, and have left you listless.
There's a point in a life when you will stand before the endless sea, and you'll know that what you could have been, was limitless.
Of all the things, of all the people you would not be, the walls you did not climb, the lines that were prohibited.
All the paths, all the ways, all the days, when you took a knee - they brought you here, and you, now... the only witness.
The past has left you behind, right? Do you now see?
Just how wrong you can be, just how flawed, and ridiculous it is to perform your play, and stare straight on into eternity.

Paths XI

Everyone gathers to see the sun go down Dare I try to fathom why I guess it is a beautiful thing to witness But what does it do to us exactly To illicit our undivided admiration

Does it represent the ending we desire Like the old stories of the elephant graveyard Where they just go to die Alone and separate from the herd
A quiet and detached mortal sunset

Does it represent the ending of a day Wrought with adventure or the mundane Or a great struggle to endure Relieved, finished, a demarcation point That leads to a comforting paradise

Is it the color of a filtered star Becoming bareable to the naked eye A searing, blinding heat reduced Becoming warm and inviting Like a candle in a cold dark cabin

And here we all are staring at this spectacle Our minds fleeing to something profound A commonality that gathers That brings us to the same place To a story that now sinks below the horizon

Paths X

Was it a dream

All of it

The torture

The flight

The distance

My first brush with death

Or was it

Just a continuation

Just a condition

Just a pattern

Where is the evidence

Any of it

My family

My past

My hope

The rains have ceased

It's quiet

Too silent

Too hollow

Too certain

Paths VIII

Everyone who was ever close, everyone I ever admired, have only ever fallen away.

Time is all that it takes.

So what do you do for nearness?
What do you do for comradery?
Will it be available this day?

As time keeps what it takes.

So many have come and gone on the well worn paths I follow - the ever forward slippery ways.

Don't fall! For that is all it takes.

Paths VII

It's a wierd path I've followed Mostly through the world of dreams It was always so much more ... grounded

I guess throughout the years I have blended the two
The realm of dreams and the real
It is now an easy thing to do

Convenient for sure To trade one for another To leave the hour of trouble And traverse the world anew

But why are my dreams so dark

Paths VI

It's just about eighteen minutes From home to work
Time for about three songs
And a sugarless iced latte

Occasionally, I'll hear Morrison And his intriguing monotone Or Maynard with his wicked whispers Their cadence in the morning darkness

It's always been an escape for me An alternative destination Someplace contrary to where I'm headed And the burdens beyond the doors

I guess that's what it's all about, though The unrealistic and the real
The fantasy and the monotonous Sting's synchronicities said it all

There was a time in a distant chaos
A very real chaos, I have to say That Shostakovich led the way I could feel his angst and anger

He created fifteen epic journeys About survival and resistance Vaste notes of madness and sorrow That could only be appreciated alone

It's the same old tune though, isn't it I can hear Mozart's Requiem Beethoven's Ninth

Bruckner

Somehow, the sounds are more real

As I think about it all

Getting lost in their thoughtfulness

Makes the trip to work ... possible

Paths V

Welcome to my world of botanical wonder I will be your docent today We will begin our story with the history of why we are here, and then we may encounter the specialties that I find so dear.

For gardeners receive their spark very early Knowing what it is that they must do to master the green things of this life and with simple tools made strong and true, manage the earth on this great big ship of fools

The first plant it is that we will encounter is a very very nice one Not just your average apple, but a Black Sapote On the outside green, and when truly done, an almost black/brown interior will be seen

It is a wonderful fruit to behold and taste with a spoon, no less Like a mellow sweet chocolate pudding that you should so eagerly caress, for its subtlety is one to supremely impress

Right next to it, is one that is equally divine Another Sapote from a different tribe It too is green on the outside, but inside, a creamy white taste not hard to describe Vanilla, lemons, and beauty of which I subscribe

Here they are together, White and Black Sapotes growing on the same land Offering their fruits as we walk on by Leaving them behind to see what more we can find on this wayward ship of fools managed by mankind

Paths IX

When presented with the lie
You naturally will resist, right

But what about all the rest Of all listeners, I do speak

And then there's that one thing
Time, and all that it enwraps

Everything it holds prisoner Made so difficult to unbind

It can be done, but never easily Many never know truth in chains

Deception is such a selfish thing Compounded by the long view

For a lie measured over distance Can become accepted knowledge

It comes down to the listener And the elusive freedom to think

A desire to dig for something lost
And a mind that is willing to find

When imprisoned, bound in chains
You must be extremely dangerous

And truth cannot entertain a lie
..... but didn't we choose both

Paths IV

Out the door and thrown away
All that you could hope for on this day

It's over ...never to return

What is it that was lost So irreverently tossed

Young life ...never to return

Ever forward must we go With what little we may know

The past ...never will I turn

For there resides the pain
No hope is there to gain

Onward ...never can I turn

What future lies ahead
Now that the past is surely dead

A path ...never to recur

Paths III

It was such a beautiful sight Winding through the bountiful fruit trees On a wandering path of stone

Any thoughtful person would love it That comfortable homey feeling Of a peaceful untarnished Eden

But like Eden, a snake found the path And whispered some convenient lies Of injustice - discrimination

For this path, some could not follow
And jealousy becomes fertile ground Where the lies of inequality grow

Everything had to be remade
So the disenfranchised could follow
The beauty of a wandering path

The stones were removed one by one And great adjustments made things conform Because the trees were so close, some fell

They dug the dirt beneath the stones Surveyors and levels were in play More trees fell by the end of the day

The weathered stones could no longer be used
They were too round, too irregular Strict consistencies were to be enforced

The costs of the surveyors and levels

Along with the new design requirements Became so very expensive

Eventually no more could be done
To the excavated lonely scar Amongst the broken bones of the trees

Now, none follow a beautiful path
And in that, all have become equal All can now suffer together

For the snake is a great liar
He separated the unequals
So there could be no helping hand

And that is all it would have taken To help those who have not, become whole And appreciate a beautiful winding path

Paths II

Whiting eat the sand fleas before me, that burrow all around my feet at the point of a midnight island where sharks, you may likely meet.
The dangers of the flowing currents made swifter by outgoing tide, won't stop me from walking the shallows, though dread may be flowing beside.
For this is my place, you see, at the edge of the watery deeps - where flashes of silvery evasions may flare into splashing leaps.
A feast in a moonlit kingdom where they dance in dark blue light.
Just there, I could easily join them, but I fear their dreadful bites.
I know they would never accept me, and I know they could never be true.
So I walk the edge in the shallows and dream of their kingdom of blue.

Paths

So where does this wonderous story begin?
Quite literally, the back of a school bus/down the road/ at society's end.
A daily hour of respite while lost in a tome before exiting into youthful, chaotic din.

The world that absorbed me and pulled me in were the writings of White on Arthurian legend.
They took me to a place so far from my home at the edge of the woods fore the great swamp's bend.

The swamp would one day help me blend in and escape the sharp clutches of tyrannical kin.
The beginning of freedom and a lifetime to roam - to discover the real world that I now lived in.

But on that fateful day, when it all would begin, as the trees of the swamp did help me to blend, a tortoise came forth from out of the loam and before me would rest at the place I was in.

Like Merlyn's owl, a message could send, so too a wisdom from my four legged friend who carried around his fortress of home as far as he dared around green glade's bend.

Not me, I swore, I would fly as the wind,
As the bird in the book - all the way to the end.
They'll catch me if burdened and slow to roam, but in flight, no clutches would I ever fend.

So freedom was won - new life would begin as I left the copse and the turtle therein

No more would the edge of the swamp be my home.
I flew and I flew; my own message to send.

But I never forgot the tortoises glen and my flight from my past did come to an end.
Now I walk sure and I carry my home.
No more a flame that is blown by the wind.

Passage

He who crosses the threshold will never be the same
He who comes back will epitomize the change His countenance reflective of his wizened new name

Parallaxes

I was there when you blew, but I had already beat you to it.
Thrown out, as debris, but with a determination you could not see.

Where would I go, where would I flee, and would you hunt me down and catch me?
You tried, but it was too late, too late to determine my fate.

I looked back one day and I saw the glow, and knew there would be no end to it.
It forced me to run so much further to get away, to see the light of another day.

to the coast I would go to a place you did not know where the waters continually flow where happiness isn't as hollow

Fear was such a driving force.
At the time I couldn't recognize it, but in a way, you continued to prod, continued to sway, continued to drive me further away.

When the ground shook, I knew it was you.
When your roar shattered my ears, created the fears that forced me to tears, I'd go yet further away.

To make me, then to take me down a horrid path, to enjoy it.
To break me into all the pieces, for all of your raging reasons, to which I was behest.

and so it is today i still feel the dismay knowing the word 'betray' feeling its slow decay

But isn't that how everything goes?

To live a life, and just endure it, because of the damage, because of the dread, because of the pulling of the thread. It leaves you kinda dead.

It was all of the things you said.

It was how I would make my bed, and live in the moment, and dream of derailment of your train of thought. My opponent that should not be.

Numb to the workings of the world,

Into which I was hurled, and left to wander like a lost soul still in your control, riddled with holes, riven of goals.

it's here that I will be for I can now truly see the damage done to me having never been free

Old Lighthouses II

So I went to the ocean and peered into its soulless depths and veered from the cold darkness that sought my embrace

So I looked back across the land across the land I had known across a dying landscape of souls that had none to embrace

And I wondered so very deeply Where were the warnings of old

And I pondered on the witness On why the warnings weren't told

So I looked for my reflection on the windy, choppy seas on the windy sandblown beach that was the edge of the knife

So I came to an understanding of my sandy ocean shores of my sandy plastered skin that there ever was just one light

And I thought about the warning About how it was misplaced

And I wondered if the criers Had left this world disgraced

So if something was to be done about the darkening times ahead about the peoples so mislead as they hearken to these shores

So if light could show the future about to dash upon the rocks about to find the soulless depths and fill its endless stores

There had to be a candle Before the mirror that would light

There had to be a spark Before the warning could ignite

Old Friend

It's a short ride from the funeral hall
Just down the road and to the right
The procession is slow and deliberate

The police blocking the intersections Can see through the windshield A graying solitary man suddenly distraught

It must be the ceremony nearing its end Or the rain drops beading on the glass Regardless, the sorrow is now unleashed

Grabbing the umbrella, as it will be needed Calming the emotions on the walk to the tent
There will be those who will want to talk

Thankfully, the bearers work quickly
And the speaker efficiently begins
As the gray world shrinks into background

The covering tree was planted years ago Quite simply for this final occasion
It will need the rain now pouring down

It seems that the large crowd dispersed Somewhere during this eternal storm
And somehow my shoes are soaking wet

It was an obligation to remain, though To stand there alone in the deluge
To see this thing through to the end

Even the tree could not help but weep

For today, was a sorrowful day That the heavy skies could not deny

Not the Religion I Knew

I won't believe in it How could you expect me to

It is convincing, I have to say In all the things that we must do

But why do I have this inkling That something is blocking the view

Could it be the politicians
All the convenient words they spew

Or how about the lawyers Laying the foundations askew

Maybe we could throw in some salesmen To tally the debt that's due (Sorry about my sarcasm Disliking salesmen is my issue)

Nevertheless, I still don't believe This religion is simply untrue

There are far too many liars And Truth is not in their purview

Noir

It was a slight movement That could've given him away But there were none to notice

Few find comfort in this gloom Mostly they just would fear it And avoid it in the shadowy night

Here with creatures unseemly With scavengers and thieves Those inconvenient to the light

Of a society that will not see Its decaying grim alleyways Riddled with forgotten bastards

Whose rise it should have caught And relegated to oblivion
In a reliable forgettable purgatory

But they didn't see the slightness
Of its loathed and unwanted one When he moved so subtly this night

And therein lies the irony For he welcomed his disdain
The great Gift from his creators

Soon, he would show them
Of their inevitable future
Of all they had manifested in him

A moment of reckoning

When he would make the final move
And reveal all they had created

Again, a slight movement
A flicker of motion in the gloom Timing himself for the passerby

Nigh

The twilight period just before night
An in-between place that I so revere

When the lights start glowing upon the street And anxiousness fills listless air

Where the allure of shadows and unlit spaces Create a beguiling atmosphere

It is here I will find inception Evening's mystical premiere

neue welt

accordion in the background at Dunderbaks again
"Eins, Zwei, Drei..." the haus pilsener has bittering bitterness that dwells within "Zicke Zacke, Zicke Zacke Hoi Hoi Hoi"
'Dvo?ák' is its name a bier from the New World indeed
but has the new forgotten the old do we fall for the same old traps from our ancient, ancient past der Juden, persecuted again will there be yet another night a shattering of the modern age sharp fragments of hate to pass for justice, for righteousness for a nationalistic hourglass of decending sands, and ending plans it's a little different this time but is it ever really when a race itself deems the death of another a necessary sacrifice

"Deutschland, Deutschland über alles, über alles in der Welt" do the Phillistines have a song where der Juden cannot dwell in the ancient ancient belt it brings up a serious question from a long lost former age should the problem have been dealt with so it could not rise again should the mercy have been shown so the two could dwell within can two peoples live together and take it on the chin when they follow different paths that will never fall therein accordion has gone silent the world will hold its breath Deutschland, notwithstanding the story repeats again

"Eins, Zwei, Drei..."
a countdown to the past when the world was left in darkness and hope would end up lost in a dirge of long lost sorrow
indeed

Narcissist

Twisted with lies are all of your words
The embodiment of selfishness
You will play your game as an ally Until it's time to bite and chew Then will your greedy ways absorb you
The wicked smiles you give so deeply The sleaze oozing from you pores A compliment - an awkward treason Who can say what will be your reason But surely it will be nothing new Selfishness is the great destroyer In the world you only see as you
It will bite and chew and devour Until there is nothing left to chew How can you say that you never knew?

My American Finger

I do not understand why the moth flies into the flame Has he never been singed

I will not be an animal who continually does the same Willfully unhinged

I am human and American, and I am not ashamed

The scumbags next door living in their stagnant squalor
I reject your lifestyle - abhorrently

Your pets determine your fate and compound your putrid living state
I will dismiss you completely

I am human and American, and I am not ashamed

All powerful doctors with your taut chains of salvation
I can see through your ruse

A religion wrought by quivering hands and wandering contemplations Your tithes, will I refuse

I am human and American, and I am not ashamed

For freedom is what matters to me and not the ways of the worldly
Of that, you can be sure

But the world has never seen itself and into the flame it flies
Many of my compatriots sadly, there, will die

But I am human and American and will not be ashamed

So now the judgement comes from those who hate my ways

I really do not care

But I know that in your mind, you happily count my days

Googling with your ever present stares

Just know this, I am human and lived as an American - free, and I will not be ashamed

Muzzle

COVID is a curse in every way and now a method which to hide not just your face or implicit shame, but immutable western pride.

How it came, well, only doctors say - ignorant of its sinister side.
"Put on your mask!"; "Do it our way!"
OR, "All of the innocent will die!"

I wonder, way back in the day, when doctors with beaks tending bedside, could do nothing, but look like a shade and wait for death's outgoing tide.

Did it work? Was the plague unmade?
Did masks of horror with muffled chides help nosy doctors to save the day, or was it a superstitious ride?

I know how distant we all are today and how the plague is used to divide by zealots way too eager to shame - using our fear's unsteady stride.

The doctrine of doctors, to me is insane and its power is seen far and wide.
"Have faith in the medic", some will say.
That oppressive power is what I despise.

Go away oh 'beaked one', leave me this day.
My life is for me to decide!
Through your mask, must I blow out the flames of fires you've tended worldwide?!

I know that my words may cause some dismay, so I'll propose that we all may decide.

Put on your mask and blow out a flame.

If you can, was it all ill prescribed?

Multiplicity Duplicities

Roses are red Viruses are dead
What else have you taught me

Columbus - first to touch the land That's what you'd have me understand So it must verily be

But what if I disagree
I have eyes that can see
And this world is still a mystery to me

In some places, roses are pink Which really makes me think About all of the possibilities

And viruses, well they're dead
I can't get it out of my head They can replicate? ... Really?

But what if it's not true
Just like roses can't be blue They don't have the anthocyanines

Columbus did sail an ocean blue But the first? They said it was true!
I think the Zeno Brothers would disagree

So how many things are still a lie
I need to find out before I die May this be my soliloquy

And about the touted multiverse

A notion old-timers deem perverse Something they would never conceive

It makes it easy to explain the comics
How about the aforementioned topics Roses, viruses and the Columbus seas

For if a duplicate universe could be To justify all of these complexities What a happy man I could be

Ah, but life is never that plain With liars, cheaters and those insane To teach us of all the things we see

Monster

It wasn't a beast who broke me
For that would be expected
No, it was something so much more familiar and respected

It wasn't an animal who tore me asunder To feed or to protect his young No, it was a fellow being who wanted me undone

For beasts are in the natural world
To fulfill their roles, perform their duties
But people, do I fear the most - so creative with their cruelties

It wasn't an animal who shot Kennedy or Reagan
It wasn't anything wild that tortured the Jews
And I've seen lives effectively ended by familial words in the news

It wasn't a bear who stole your retirement Or a fox who took your jewels
It was the mind of a brother breaking society's rules

Like I said, they are very very creative And 'get' you when you're unaware They watch and wait and scheme until you fall into their snare

It wasn't a real monster in that fiction book That ate everyone alive
No, the author's words weren't flippant or contrived

It wasn't his folly in the pages
It was what he feared the most He alluded to an evil - deep in our human host

It came to me once in a dream - so so long ago

A giant chased me as I ran in fear And once I looked, did the face appear

More than a monster More than a ghost

monomania

To turn dark Fill with hate Suddenly

So envious
Of one and all
And they will pay

To give them malice
To relish their pain
To feel victory

For it is just Spare not the cost Neither the peace

And be lost In selfish Jealousy

Modernity

the fire is from within the cold is from without any other notion creates a state of doubt and doubt is what there is as people scream and shout is grey the only thing this world can be about this place i do not like i want to cast it out i want to shriek my rage and fire my words all about i want this world to know it feeds my inner rage it pins me down and stifles me and leaves me in a cage i cannot live this way i cannot thrive in grey i will not wear the knives they've dealt and sleep in grey dismay my bed i toss and turn i want it all to burn and light the night with black and white and make the judge adjourn in blight i live today a state of mass decay none now know none now see they've cast it all in grey

moab

did you ever hear a story that stretched its way across the sky encapsulated the world with pride only to dive beneath and swim the tides, azure skies replacing the tail streaking by they always come back, you know, the old once again new as if a collective memory shows its face below the blue and what a tail it was, and what a tale it will be when all will one day see the message above the sea it was all about a life from the beginning to the end to ascend the heights, and to the depths, again descend surrounded by the light - an attempt to resplend anything one could possibly transcend before diving yet again
"what will be, will be", someone once said another one said, "we make our own bed" i think that when my last argument has been pled that i shall make a final decree, and that it will be, my friend, that i will once again find my place in the sea

Missing

Sunset

Pier

Cliche music

Cheeseburgers

In paradise

Tourists

Footsteps

Rhythmic beats

Pelicans splashing

In the blue

Anxious

Buzz

Sirius XM

Work tomorrow

Seriously blue

Miser

To put things in good standing That's what I will do I'll make you watch YOUR money
I do this all for you
You cannot know my motives For I have thought them through Revealing my great plan Would make you want to sue I will lay it out in graphs Like all great misers do I'll hide the truth in numbers
You will see it oh so true
And when my creature hatches And comes right after you
The colors of my monster Will hook you through and through

Memories of a Bastard Son

Flashes of a field behind a red house Spiders live in its brittle walls
The neighbors barn is filled with hay
It doesn't matter there if you fall
Our house encloses turmoil and hate Strife occurs within those walls I'm immune because of my age
As I watch those within crumble/fall
It began there, in a youthful state My innocent stance kept me whole
The product of a faithless day And a selfish deed that started it all The hay next door - my hidden stage A place to hide when darkness called The field behind the blood red house A place to run and leave it all The spiders saw me, but did not bite Too small a meal to fill their jaws They lurked in crevasses just out of sight Watching/Waiting/for them all The house is gone now and its too late Its bloody past turns into lore
The creeping things that were in that place Made it so there was nothing more

Memento Mori

Went to work today
Only to find dismay Feelings so very wrong
Under the surface they dance and play

First it was Stan, then it was Shaun On one lonely weekday, both, gone Who could have ever predicted this day Empty times, when all is so very wrong

The enemy hovers over everything, it seems No hindrances, full reign, as they tease
They do as they please, and we stand in awe Frozen, just staring, they do as they please

They do as they please

Memento Vivere

Manifest (btfeu)

Being exactly what it is you have to be, only because there is not a real choice.
Respect, yeah, something this world can't see no matter how loud is its pitiful voice.

Totally free, are the fish in the sea only because there's nothing else they can be.

Found, the paths, determined by a fruit tree under which all of mankind did fall.
Counting the ways you could get to the sea knowing everything, yet nothing at all.

Every road before you will be what will be - virtuously, or not, will lead thee to naught.
Every path you see will not set you free regardless of how religiously ... ye be.
Youth set aside, you should see clearly the journey you've determined for yourself.
Hidden, are the snares you could never see in every line you could ever follow or flee.
Never again will a chance to repeat be, given that you ate from the fruit tree.

Under the surface of the waves of the sea perish the fish, and all else that cannot be.

Lush III

Some would think I'm a lush And honestly, I wouldn't care

For some should just hush Lest they aimlessly err

On the side of one who bluffs Would some who never dared

Take the veil off themselves And show themselves impaired

By the vices they do embrace But have never ever shared

Lush II

At the German pub again.
My liter, my thoughts, and emptiness that never ends.

Was that a reference to my glass?
You know, that large dimpled thing that sometimes kicks my ass.

Ah, I'm moving on to another den with my thoughts and burdens, as litered rauchbiers kick in.

Will the meadery brighten my mood?
I guess anything is possible.
Their libations are exceptionally good.

But their mazers are just as wicked.
You know, those goblet looking things to which I'm devoutly committed.

Yes, another way to fill the emptiness.
Honeyed ambrosia is surely just that!
I hope all the other voids are envious!

Lush

Sour things are afoot under the 7venth Sun sour in a great way

Subtle nuances so expertly done to end a Long day

Bretanomyces and guavas have won my respect and may yet send me swimming in a pool of fun

...at this crowds dismay

This 6% sour needs an aqualung if I have my way

?

Lost Title

The gait of the walk
The look of the face
The sound of the voice
In a familiar place

Your name has escaped
My mind with no trace Synapses don't fire
As I lose my race

To capture that name
And shed my disgrace Of forgetfulness
And cold empty space

The state of my mind
A chalk board erased Can you forgive my Clumsy thoughts misplaced

Leviathan

Rising up out of the ocean Impossible, yet there you are Striding always towards me Frighteningly bizarre

A scene from a childhood dream That does never fade away A presence, always so heavy A sneer, always on display

I knew what horror awaited me
One the ocean would no more hide It never should have been this way
But that, I could not decide

The nightmare has long since ceased You no longer menace me so So why is it the ocean still calls me Why, to its edge, must I still go

Lessons from the Beach II

Calm is the current state - of that, I am wary For nothing in this world could ever be

As beautiful as it is, there is no life Nothing breaks the smooth surface skin

Expectancy is now born in a state as this Suspense on its edge, anticipation

For time can never stay the inevitable;
the sudden splash at solitude's end

Lessons from the Beach

Salt burns the edges of the leaves
As the wind whips up the white sands Stinging quartz crystals scour me Before curtained and waving bands Of deluge and flashing stark scenes Can drive me here from where I stand This coming tempest is set free To assault my whimpering land With wind and wave and leaning trees And grasping gelid frost bound hands It occurs that I am shivering For 2021 is now at hand

Kingly Lines

"Is everybody in
Is everybody in
Is everybody in
The ceremony is about to begin"
~ The Lizard King

And so it shall on this sixth of fifths With all of the rumors, all of the myths
All of the rituals that you can bring All of the legends of which you'll sing
And pile onto a great mound of gifts

Can you bear the weight of your lonely crown Or will it all just be weighing you down For you know where it is we all must go Will your journey there be hopeful & slow Best you keep that royal frown, those lips ... turned down

I saw the flinch, not subtle at all
One day the great facade will fall
When we know who it is in complete control Of our floundering nation's wayward soul Swimming as a salmon already dead, in a cold waterfall

I hope you are courage, I hope you are true For the foe that is coming is nothing new He sees through the weakness of one and all
And plots our demise as we withdraw Places within us the seeds for a coup

Where are the great leaders of old Who stood tall, spoke truth, and were bold Where was the great man to bear your arms

Tending your coattails? Following your charms?
Doing the deeds he was set to do, as a slave to be sold

"When I look back
I see the landscape
That I have walked through But it is different

All the great trees are gone It seems there are Remnants of them" ~ Olav V

Karmic Justice

When the tide changes
And the boats begin to sail I'll watch and wonder

Just Before

In this calm before the storm
In this lull before destruction When red lights
They do silently scream
I know you are coming When the moss
It does whisper
Of dreams
Of peace
That will no longer be As roads
They are empty
Of dreams
That do falter
In their calming Soothing Unmindfulness
Of light
That does linger
In the realm of the night
On the edge of all you'll dismiss For tomorrow
It changes
When you reckon the hours
When you count down the moments That hope may persist But you'll chop it to pieces
And wrench the foundations Make all that is lively Listless
Powerless
Milton doth greet us
On grounds of chaos

In rounds of distress
Just to imprint us
With his windy Impertinence
His merciless Greatness Expressed

Jeff Buckley

I heard your cry
A cry for acceptance
And a place for meaning A lament of experience

Crescendos
Sad crescendos
Weariness from controls Boundaries from the start

Why does fate have to be A brutal embrace A tragedy
Of fatality

Irma and the Weatherman

After long days of waiting Come the swift grey clouds Smearing the sky with tears Curving out of the horizon Tightly leashed and obedient Triggering instinctual fears The pious clowns on TV
So seriously concerned Stumble through their prayers Drawing lines from verse to verse Feigning dread in their prophecy Interpreting truths not of their peers They fumble through their lines With the world in observance And birds, just simply disappear For Irma is coming
As the circus is performing Time for another beer

Invasion & SJW Justice

Wearied from your odious toils
You wake to a long sought victory Of taking a wayward town's spoils And forever poisoning its soils Justice has finally been served Now we can destroy everything
The Past just thought it deserved A straight line that, now, is curved Curved to the glorious end Of our new found reality Where the cries of a hateful kin To a realm of anger, will send Tear down these lines to the past Before they fish out our dubious motive Do it, and do it fast Or from this town, will we be cast Cry out,
History is dead!
History is dead!
And in its place
The soft cushions
Of an unclean bed
From this day on, the sacred past is now lost Wandering through the open fields of humility Where it has so irreverently been tossed To be stoned by us in a progression of loss Never again will we be burdened and strictured
By the lessons of a formidable past Never again will this town be pictured With a southern symbol as its fixture So onward our progressive movement will go Till every last vesture of truth is no more

Till the monuments of our past are brought low
And the seeds of destruction are sown Oh great one, your words are so clear Oh Hitler, with your great progressive path Your utopia is so very near Bestowed with inhuman progress and fear Cry out,
History is dead!
History is dead!
We raise you up
And elevate you
As our hoary head

Intimation

I hear the waves as they caress the shore
On a quiet eve after the storm

I see a bird perched on one leg, watching Wary of his companion

I feel a detachment from the scenery
As if I were somehow separate

I know that dark times are ahead of me As clouds billow in the distance

Interlinear Goliardic Rant I

O Fortuna velut luna statu variabilis

There are those who dwell above
There are those who dwell below
There are those who sit on thrones and reign in hells we cannot know Some do know what greed can be when they see the spending spree, and the greedy gritting teeth clenching hard the temple's keys

*semper crescis aut decrescis;
vita detestabilis*

Who can know when tide is high That your faith could surely die
At the hands of those who steal your most precious daily meal
They just seethe in jealousy; other's meals, they think they need Blooded steel they will unsheath, giving gilted ministries

nunc obdurat et tunc curat ludo mentis aciem,

And verily you must know That the lowly remain low
When the knights that reign supreme take this world in infamy
All your morals can't be right before the valiant righteous knight And to flee just proves him right, and leaves you in horrid blight egestatem, potestatem, dissolvit ut glaciem.

For the lowly cannot rule Amongst crowns made up of fools
As they no longer see their oppressive futilities In their hands, they'll hold it tight - hold and hold with all their might Till fire's vengeance comes to sight; breaks hold of winter's bite

Injurious Destiny

I'm not the same anymore.

Broken? Beaten?

Or did I just yield?

Some of it is involuntary.

This new path, where does it lead?

The intensity is as before.

The destination - that, I do not know.

Broken again, indeed!

Is it time to change once more?

Like I said, "Some of it is involuntary".

But who and what will I be?

Who wants all of these cracks?

So recent is this new injury.

It could have ended so easily.

But it didn't, just as before.

I breathe now for the answers.

Infinitesimal

a wet journey with rain tears falling from the sky above slick dimly lit the moon's rays do unfurl illuminating a grey-black world walking with somber ripples sadness lonely quiet at home this is where I belong with thoughts greyer than the scene above to contemplate appreciate to love what some would deem as eternal gloom but I am of the shadows of the moon what else could one like me be when grey is all I see light is a treasure all of its own but light has been dimming for so very long the pall of the moon it does settle lightly to rest upon this tomb an ending effect once born of the womb but one day the rain will cease and the pneum the breath of the moon will flee one day when light does resume you will see you will see

Individuals

Remember the 90's and the angst Remember the long hair and the beach Remember when we didn't care

Remember the war with spider holes Remember the Northern Exposures Remember the joints that left us unaware

We were individuals
Barely related to our surroundings Yet somehow, we were spared

Remember the downing of a friend Remember Helga who would bartend Remember shark infested dares

Remember dreams so vividly true Remember the snook, the redfish Remember the tarpon and all we spared

We were individuals
At the pinnacle of freedom When none cared how we fared

Yet, we're still here Still drinking beer Still at the pier

Illusion?

What if it's not true Those things we get from the news Leaving all so skewed

Idalia, Predictions Perceived

Ignorance

Denials

All around

Lies, maybe

Institutionalized

Idalia, Depredation Achieved

Intimacy was your intended goal Drowning, drowning, screaming soul
All of the past must surely go Lost, lost to an endless flow Into the sea, you send it whole All will know, all will know the costly toll

Idalia, Acrostically Received

I can see your clouds moving Doing whatever you command All waters will be rushing (to) Languish our sandy land
In a few hours you are coming And I will witness firsthand

Ian

So we all gather at the pub
Those of us who think alike
The last horah before the storm
When the reluctant sun rises Beginning the ordeal
Who is it that will suffer

The young will seek adventure
The old ones take on stores
The new ones live in fear
As he ravages our shores

A gust of vengeance blows through The branches and the moss Will soon be on the ground A whitewash of stinging rain Surging ocean walls
To wash away our gain

When we all find our shelters
And stores do serve no more I'll write my lonely feelings Amidst his ever present roar

Tonight will be a loud one
The house will thump and moan From this cyclone in the dark I've been through this before And I'll endure it once again With respect and quiet witness

For Ian gave his message
As he beat upon my door

He let me know his greatness To revere forever more

I See the World

I once watched the face before me
The lift, of the corner, of a mouth
The lowering, of the lid, of an eye

A message to emanate unspoken
One of vengeance, one of malice Once again, I felt like I could die

To stall the punishments in every day I would find a way to delay, alter the mood Before everything would go awry

One day, there was a hiding place That would lead to the world outside One day, a bird would take to the sky

To see the world, the peoples, the ways Ways that were so much different than mine
But it was ingrained, these methods that I designed

It would lead to a life of solitude, silence To witness the things that be, to see Everything in my world, subjected to time

I was able to take on the feelings Of the peoples that surrounded me I could see who they were within their eyes

I could feel their thoughts from their stance
I would go into my visual trance
I knew, and they knew that I did not lie

Caution and respect, how I would be met

But the heavy hand of time told its story too
Just like a human's eyes, time did not lie

I saw it take its firm hold on mankind
I saw things from the past, where things did go How all of times spinnings and cycles aligned

How history and the ways of mankind repeat Over and over again, lessons lost, relearn, repeat A limited time cycle, to keep man blind

It creates a relative scenario in my mind Because of the methods I had to design
If only I could look into the eye of time

Hungry II

Questions are dangerous things They are powerful - demanding Weapons, they can surely be

Why do you do your wrongs
The things that are so tempting Do you have an answer for me

For whatever reaction you give I will carefully be watching My weapons will help me to see

Some may choose not to answer
They are only running From my weapons so desperately

For nothing is just another answer Being the opposite of something That can be seen ... so ... clearly

I guess I use them if I want to know What it is that may be hiding
And I use them very frequently

Because I can wield their great power Over those who are unwitting To get all the answers I need

Hungry

My path is undetermined
As I stumble through this life
A vampire tried to take it With a more than fatal bite

A shocking introduction
To a dark and wondrous world
A need that ever tempts me When the night time has unfurled

It may sound like a cliché
As I tell this lonely tale But tonight will be something That will make my victims wail

Where shall I hunt steadfastly And what methods will I use To feed this lustful yearning That for me, I did not choose

It's not like I control it
The desire is just too great A need to take them fully When their protests are too late

You'll scream my name, you vermin I'll drink up all of your pain
A scene that ever drives me To make all your color drain

So down the road I'll wander When the blackness takes my town I'll find the one who needs me

To take all life's barriers down

how?

well, I guess you have to care care more about your fellow man more than the rules of the game change the parameters you know so well steer the ship down a different lane for all lanes are not the same it won't be easy, that's for sure it will have to be a selfless thing to slowly make it all become plain so that everyone can see the truth of a foundationless, swaying structure held loosely together by greed and gain it will take one to set the example it will take two to make the pact with three, the start of a campaign but never forget what led you here to change your selfish mind for history does recur again, and again

Hourglass

Spiders live in the walls of a creaky old shack waiting for the one who will soon come back She knows that the spiders are very aware and a bite from the black ones with red in their back leads only to despair Despair is something she does not lack as a witch with no victims wrapped up in a sack No spells can she cast on a damsel so fair Fair victims are The things that she should not lack as she returns to her dark dark, spidery lair
When midnight has finally crept its way back and wind blows the witch's small creaky shack A damsel comes knocking with windblown blonde hair - hair so blonde and very fair
The witch with a start grabs her big sack and stifles her voice that sounds like a cack and opens her door just a crack to see a girl so fair
"I took a wrong turn, can't find my way back; will you let me enter your small black shack, so that I may be sheltered from the midnight air?"
It's then the fair damsel enters the shack and sees it's The Witch holding a sack who's other hand moving with artistic flair draws her yet forward into the lair.
But a fearful shiver crept up her back and made the witch drop the big sack that was meant for the girl so fair
"A witch should not fear in her own creaky shack, but you, my dear, leave - do not come back!
Forsake my dark
spidery lair!"
"Oh shut it, you shriveled old hack who long ago turned your bent back cause you simply just didn't care.
My dad, he warned you and called you a 'wack' who forever filled her big sack with gains that were gotten unfair".

"And now that he rules and you've been sent to the back and dwell in your old rickety shack with an empty sack and a cupboard that's bare,

I've come to haunt you cause there's no turning back, your spiders have caught you you're stuck in your trap...

They've been watching, those that are black with red on their back...

fair is fair".

Hole In The Windshield

Somehow, in the hospital, I awake.
There's nothing shocking about this; why?
After all, didn't I almost die?
It's funny how I have this disjointed take of the surroundings where I lie.

Somehow, at home, do I awake.
At more familiar surroundings, I sigh.
Now in my 90's waterbed, do I lie.
Was I not just at the lake with my friend by my side?

Somehow, in the living room, do I awake.
Two dogs staring at me - eye to eye.
My explosive head makes me want to die.
How much more pain can I take as I sit there not knowing why?

Somehow, in the hospital, I reawake.
Holding a hand as I lie on my side.
I feel the needle slowly slide up my spine.
Searing pain and a jolt will make a helping hand ache and a mortal cry.

Somehow, 25 years later, I awake thinking of how those days changed the tide.
What happened? Those memories still hide.
It's funny to think of the path you take when you find out you can die.

Harbinger

The hay field glows before the dark billows behind With a gray-blue curtain advancing across the field Soon the world will change and become very different

I can smell the scent of a vast suspended ocean Enhanced with a charge just waiting to release
The cold breeze foreshadows a future of indifference

The rumbles of war hidden behind your grand cloak And flashes that can be seen by all within your path Tell me that there is no escape and only hope will sustain

I have seen you before and have endured your wrath Mesmerized by the power and ferocity of your presence
But the glow of the grass in the field this day is screaming

Grindavíkurbær

Veins full of fiery blood coursing through with angst and fear.
Seeking an out, feigning outre sentiments in a world so modern, so knowing.
"All may be well", say the town criers.
Don't look for the pain welling up beneath the fragile skin of your home, your place of being, while the smiles crack with fissures of sadness from below.
Oh when will we know, when will we know that the snows won't melt away from the cursed chaos created so, so long ago?

Gammadion

The stains have become so vibrant So prevalent

Did these shades change world Or did this world just change its rotation

What powers are there to manage it This myriad of tones and castings

The religion to blame, to solidify
The codex of understanding

No ... you cannot go there For there, is only a strict binding

Condemn that, restraint Condemn the rules, the presages

They are ancient and do not apply Yes, burn the books

Tear down the barriers
And from the pieces, make a new symbol

There can be no more resistance
No more 'concerns', no more dissent

Wear the seal with pride Display its power, disseminate

Set up new barriers, new walls
And from its hold, let none flee

New, all new

Fragility

Destruction

Onerous in a beautiful place

Removed from paradise

Inconsiderate, mercilessly paced

Another tragedy to remind us

Now of our fragile place

Foundation of a Question for the President II

Flavius 'Momyllus' Romulus Augustulus Is there something you should have said to us About our final end

I now know that it took many many generations
And when it was over, many many contemplations Just to understand

That when right and wrong come into question When complete controls and blatant oppression Do our freedoms suspend

What left is there for a free man to believe in
In a world enwrapped, surrounded by Sin And only That, will it defend

Do I blame you Romulus Augustulus for our current pain
As you represent the standard for empirical disdain
A split meant to offend

No. It's just that Selfishness is a human condition
And there is always the required Son of Perdition That both, will send us to our end

Foundation of a Question for the President I

There was a time when I was gaining ground When life was productive, safe & sound But all of that ended

What's really sad is I knew that it would Leaders no longer serve as they should Requiring knees bended

Deep disrespect for the everyday man Is an integral part of their everyday plan
My rights all rescinded

And so their scheme is all I now ponder As they take and they take, only to squander Just as they intended

Forgotten Grave

Time takes it all Doesn't it
It takes the physical presence
It takes the dreams, the hope Like sand and gravel washing down a slope

It takes the memories of love, of hate
The sadness that wore things down
The happiness that built things up
The ground that covered you up In the end

One day a finger may extend And point to a world that once was That you were once part of But even that will crumble away As time brings yet another day

fire

burning out of necessity goal is always the same to see it through, to see it true prove it out until there's no doubt that what you do, what you pursue and this life you've construed as a route that only you can take well, there's no mistake that the flames you've left behind will reach high, and take your smoldering message to the sky, until all will know the reason why you did not give up and die burnished by flames, kindled by pain inflicted by those who hate by those who wait for the moments to berate you into your incensed state that place, where the goal is always the same, where you embrace the pain and change the game only char will remain

Fast Eddies Pier II

Reaching towards the depths My refuge from hateful days You sway and move in currents You teach me your easy ways
The schools will swim beneath you And brush against your spine
The flocks will fly above you Just waiting for the time
A time to light upon you A time to dive below
A time to roost in silence
As the daytime must go In darkness, peace will find you One that cannot be explained
The stars will shine above you And down below, will you remain
The ocean does not know you It cannot see what you are My anchor to the land
In waters flowing far Distance that can't be fathomed
In all it's massive pride
But upon you, I'll take my refuge Upon you, I'll find my stride

Fast Eddie's Pier V

It's quiet today
The cool air announces the future And the birds do carry on The salt air smells clean Washed of everything Everything that has been Sand and sea are prevalent again Seems the flame did go out No more room to pretend My arrangement with my muse
It did rescind

Fast Eddie's Pier IV

the north wind is howling across the bay, towards the island home / it is winter in the subtropics, cold enough to put a jacket on / a dolphin is eating the greenbacks, so too is a seagull, who catches a gust of wind when he sees me / a lofty escape, and he's suddenly gone / the waves crash upon the shore, another lonely year / will we make it, is there more to come / my windy frigid answer leaves things a little unclear / just know that something is coming - it's cold bitter bite, resolutely shaking the pier

Fast Eddie's Pier III

The old guy with the white goatee Watching the bait underneath For when the greenbacks start poppin'
All things will change, you see

It will be time to use the lure As the quarry will be ready Hold it stoutly, keep reeling Feel the bite, keep it steady

The kid nearby has caught a grunt It's flopping on the wooden pier
"Hey, that would make a really good bait"
"Hook it in the dorsal, right here"

Scenes I've seen a thousand times As I've traversed these crusty years
One day, another like me will come To watch life and death at the pier

Fast Eddie's Pier

A small breath of air stirs the candle flame
As the flame settles, a tendril of soot rises To meet the dingy greyness above

The waitress is telling saucy tales She's certainly had too much to drink
We share that burden, as the ocean now reminds me

Old Fast Eddies sways with the current So tenuously tethered to the shore
All at the mercy of a vast expanse of ocean

The candle reminds me of my own tenuous path On this barnacled and weathered pier of life Subjected to the most violent of storms

So many times the gusts have blown So many times the flame almost died This salt crusted walk has been very long

I'm reminded of all that has been
Of those who weathered the storms with me
And of those who washed away long ago

The flame of the candle that is now before me On the windy dark night, that is tonight Flickers so frequently

Familiar

You have kept me, in all things, devotion Appointed, a servant to make things well Ordained, thy fervor is thorough, ferocious Thy colors, of scenes immortelle

Serve your master, bring me blood So that I become the legend I must Serve in portions that flow, that flood Leaving my prey as dried up husks

Alas, my epicurean footman
I hear your footsteps, know your tone
And long for my treasures, my lost ones
To be brought before my thirsty throne

For I, unike you a servant to command, am of shadow, of blight, of things undone

Facetime

Disjointed, irrational (?) - in a familiar kind of way.
"You just go all in, don't ya?".
Well / Yeah / I do, kinda like you.
How do you know these things?
How can you, in a dream, have this dominion, leave this impression on me?
How can I see you in a place you could not, should not be?

I do appreciate the boons given, the joys of life,
the tears riven, wrenched from this fake fake world.
I may not always completely agree but you are real!
As real as anyone can be,

but your presence in a dream can mean either one of two things - that you are personal symbology, another representation, another translation of who I could or should be,
but could you really be another entity that came through a curtain to thoroughly shock me with dialog, with discourse?

I dare say, that face may never leave me!

Expectancy

So how do you explain it And portray it as it is So others can see as you do All of the days of your life Charted on a spinning wheel Whose cycle will soon renew What was learned, what was lost On moments so horridly true Quite simply, an alternate point of view Butterflies flutter through this scene
A squirrel is digging for his food And memories flow with all that you knew What, again, is this all about That others may need to know What do these words construe That no matter what happens In a life wrought with sorrows The next era will soon be new so true

Endless Aftermath (Death of a Corporation)

When you died, it all rang true, and you died as all selfish things do.
It was over - all but the memory of you.
"Never again", "Never again", we all did say.
For the ending brought hope for a new day.
But days fade, just as memories fade away, and another did take the place - someone new, someone brave.
Someone who learned, saw lost ways, and past days, construed as something true.
Isn't it funny how it all repeats?
Over and over and over again.
The same old selfish deeds, revenge on those who see.
And those who never did, well, revenge will it be.
For a conglomerate mind only cares for the company.
If you think that company is you? - patience, you will see.
One day you shall be cut out, cut out as on cue.
Again, it is nothing new that has tortured you, misled you, betrayed you, enslaved you.
There was a void, and it had to be filled.
Whether that fill comes slow or comes quick, you will one day know that you were tricked, and induced to believe that they stood for you, and all that you saw as true - a corporate mind with an all-encompassing value - value for profits, and everything to do with revenues.
So what is the great lesson, when a conglomerate ends its days?
When those who were cut out, see their ways?
And will no longer praise the days of the company?
It really all comes down to you.
What you see as true, and the glasses you see your truth through.
The death of a tyranny opens the way to another day for a new tyrant to find his way to destiny.

Elemental

On a cold windy night Comes the wail of the north Howling retribution
With icy frigid hands Reaching for my slumber Seeking dissolution
Of Eden, do I yearn
In a dreamy warm realm Blinded to commotions
So saddening, the cry
The howling of the north Bereft - raw emotion I'm immune to its lure Wrapped with tranquility And fervid devotion
An island unawares
In an ocean of ice
Such rebellious notions

Effect

Can you see the darkness coming As it folds on over our world
As it shades the minds of all It has happened before, you know

Can you catch the wickedness wafting As it's snaking through our host As it slithers between us all It'll bring us to our knees, like before

Can you see the tide is changing As it washes our lives away
As it reveals what's hidden beneath You'll yearn only to breathe ... once more

Ecclesiastical Musings at Sunset

All are from the dust, Something so easy to forget As you grow, as you learn

The sparks of life Circuits of electrical charges Veins of iron, water, air

Information entangled With hormonal emotions Intricate complications

The drive to keep going To create and improve To fall and get up again

Ever forward, ever onward Through time and space Experiencing all around you

And when the path grows short And the oasis ripples into view Denouement will make its stand

If only just to remind us That our long desert journey With its ever shifting sands

Should serve as an example That we all have had a chance But to dust, shall we all return.

Dunedin Drowning

The clouds are grey beneath the 7venth Sun
As a chill permeates the street outside Coffee cacao and pecans have begun To meld well into this drink I imbibe

It sure is an inspirational place Where all these Florida Scots do reside To let me into alcohol's embrace And form my disjointed thoughts while seaside

Stairway to 7venth this can says to me
As I ascend to heaven gratified So close to the windy churning seas...
A Scotsman's liquid dream personified

Driven by the Moon

Cold is what I feel In my muted existence Why does that comfort me

It is quiet for sure When you hide yourself
In the shadows of the world

Observing it all Through a night time veil Lunacy is prescribed

To live so subtly Diminished to all Who live in starkness

Not darkness, you see Or can you see at all
With that glare in your eyes

Drinking Mead in Roosevelt's Horse Stable

A slightly moldy window view
With a blowing fern in the wall outside Stinging rain plummeting the exterior bricks

It seems I'm the only one here this day I guess that makes sense Most sensible people would stay at home

It is, after all, a day for hurricanes
And that has brought me to this place Where I can drink and remain detached

My swirling orange blossom nectar Belies the wet chaos screaming outside And howling through my Florida home

I'm really just on the outskirts of Matthew's rage Others will feel his vengeance more than I I'll just drink mead and witness it all

The floor above me has revealing gaps now In Theodore's day, it would have been a brothel
How many climbed those rickety stairs

I can imagine the dusty road outside The smells of horse and hay
The tension of an upcoming Cuban battle

Ybor still reeks of that defiant outpost
The brick walls ooze with its presence
The last stop on the way to history

I can't shake these feelings of déjà vu

Maybe Teddy's troops still haunt this place Or, maybe, things haven't changed at all

Directed Dead End

When times were happy and things did glow
An era was a comin' you could never know
A time when the sands would slow in their downward flow
And down, ever down, you would surely go Whatever happened? A decision was made To follow a path that you, yourself bade Ever forward on hard ground was it laid But strictures and structures allowed you to fade, and boy did you ever fade
So now that it's done and your road's at an end
And you grasp for a prize that blows like the wind
You know that your road and its downward bend To your empty handed fruitless end, did send

Detach (meant)

Family is what you make it, right?
A home is where you reside?
Somehow, that can't be all!

For it does all disappear.
The very thing we all fear...

A son without a father.
A mother who lost the way.
Just another day.

What if it was never there?
What if this world didn't care?

A leaf tumbling on the ground
A portrait within a painting A shooting star born of calamity A shark tooth washing ashore
A joke told with no humor

Bones from the past that bore the weight of a life full of strife - full of the pain that leads to disdain afforded a bird... with broken wings.

A home is what it was,
and family somehow made it all that it was, all that it was.

Will any of it reappear?
Just start it over, I fear.

Will the next parents be true in an imperfect world of dust?
That kind of trust, is up to you.

I know that it can't be true, that hope cannot be new?

A half-mast flag forgotten in a field

A leaning oak-frame with no roof

A Jewish man making the Hajj

A remnant tulip in the woods

A footprint in the sands of the past that just could not last, that did all wash away with every passing day, a world that wouldn't stay still, that went too fast...

way too fast...

too fast.

Dedication to Kujo

When life is gentle When life is sweet
You can never really see What will kick you off your feet
What will break your happiness And send you reeling down Send you reeling down
With your face upon the ground But take that lonely moment When your face is in the dirt When your reeling from the hurt Of the fist you did not see And think about the chance
You can get back on your feet And react to what was dealt In ways that none will see For it is time to recompense
All the methods of this world
All the "gifts" that have been hurled At your swaying dignity
And this world could never know That the stars could shine so bright When the one that felt the blow Would decide to join the fight We love you Mr. Gill
Of that, you should not doubt
We will back you all the way In this certain blowout bout

death's lonely door

right now, it's windy, it's dark there's a storm a brewin' the likes, i've never before seen and that's before you enter therein you know, the door that ends all things been here for a long long time, waiting waiting in the twilight of all that's been waiting for the end of trials without, and within waiting as a stand-in for the next one that sins one that's been around, as i have been you know, before the door opens, and i enter therein this is also where the problem comes in see, it's windy, a storm's a brewin' more is certain to happen before the end it's a lonely place, a lonely state this place where you silently accept your fate so, there's nothing really to lose, right?

nothing but gain in the upcoming fight, right?
'nothing'... an interesting word that could be a lie so, I guess you take a chance at your plight go to the source of the storm, the blight go to the problem, it's terms, the inevitable night do you worry about structure, stability, and all such things no, you just flow, you just go it's the way it has always been you never thought about such things when entering in all of the other doors you frequented becoming all of the states you shouldn't have been just go, because, really, you never know it's gonna be hard to face, when you get to that place to this party you'll attend just before the end
'party', another interesting word, when you're the only guest the only guest to receive the test the test given as a party favor, the last favor before the end you know, because the party too, will ultimately end so, what's the problem amongst all of this gloom? the enemy, the one i've been hiding from at the threshold of the lonely door for he's been waiting too, waiting for the fool the fool that i have always been you see, i've faced him before, over and over again and never, have i ever been able to win so at some point, you just run run to the door at the end a place that's easy to defend because, as a fool, you don't understand that it's the place he would ultimately send the place no one wants to go the place where the fool will end where he can forever win the plan? again, i really don't have one my plans always end in naught in every battle i've ever fought in all of the trials i've never sought i guess i'm looking for a different kind of door and this is the hope i have a different door to look for, something more it's not a place i've ever been it's not the door at the end it's a place that leads to the war within i hope you can understand this war is the one I really need to win

amen

Death of a Magnate

When did you forget Who you were to be You know, oh holy priest

Was it the money That brought you down
You kneeling beast

Was it your charm
That lured the sheep Provided your needs

Or was it the farm
That must expand
To plant your seeds

You had to know
That all of the greed Could never be free

Cumbre Vieja

Why will you not stop Flowing, building, screaming Your presence is relentless Clear vision flees from you From your heavy acrid breath
And your sulfuric rumblings Devastation lies in your wake As you forge a new foundation
One with no regard for the past Why will you not go away Contemptuous tormentor Must I endure your malicious waves

Crazy Girl

Verging on losing complete control Grabbing a vice, and shaking it Squeezing out life till there is no more Opening the door Relentless is the manic wave Flowing from a chaos unknown Forcing a point that's not worth making She so loves taking All that is given in sympathy Chewed and ground, thrown into the sea
And still her storm swirls and rages With mixed up pages

Counting

Five needle fish swim above the sands
One for this day, free of commands Two for the liberty just to think As those moments just seem to blink Out of existence on this shortened path Three for the reminder that I used to catch Other fish when I used them for bait Yeah, like bait - how I'm feeling of late Four swimming moments have already passed But the fourth, he is not the last He's just a reminder of the final fish
And all the past things I've totally missed

Coronal Mass Ejections

Seething, boiling, eruptions Aimed at all of those around you Who can fathom those upwellings Who can stand before your wrath

It has always seemed so random
When you decide to release it all But the result is ever the same
The aftermath, the burdens of destruction

Your ruthless energy causes upheaval Great earthquakes shake our foundations Cracking storms of energy alert us To the powerful whirlwinds to come

How could we not be anymore awake
For the biblical tidings you bequeath us How could we possibly ever ignore The irreverence of your blinding presence

For I know the sting of your whips
And I ran from their lashes years ago But age has taught me the lesson That there is nowhere really to go

Your reach is beyond all measure And when the time is finally at hand
You can take all I have accomplished And smite it to dust and rubble

Respect will ever be demanded Obeisance is your only reward For you know nothing of kindness

Of concern for the tortured soul

Closed

Remembering the car
Up and down the street Frantic, searching Couldn't see me in the tree

Across the hay field Witnessing the end
A search as it ceases
When new life did begin

That was it, never again never again

Through the front door
The screaming rage Matriarchal wrath
Did arrive this day

The sledgehammer
Reasonless, incensed
A shattered door
All the violence

That was it, never again
never again

Some pick up that mantle
And take the same stance
The sledge and the door
Is their only chance

But I will not admit Will not let them in

Will not go down that path
It will not begin

Never again, never again never again

Cancer

They don't know how long I've known you.
I have protected your existence.
None of my best friends know you, but I do, and unlike everything in this world, you have been faithful and true.

You've been there for a long long time.
Almost twenty years and counting.
My quiet companion, never maligned Though you serve as a sign that my world is running out of time.

I guess all things just have to die, like the summer shower that just passed over, and no matter how much stubbornness, and pride that may reside within me, one day, your presence I'll no longer hide.

Broken Water Pipe

I dig and then I dig no more
The ground is like an open sore
A wound that opens up so wide
It makes it hard for me to hide
I know that what I've done is wrong
The condemnation will be long May waters flow and wash away
The deed that I have done this day I hope that you will let it go And help me cover up this woe For wounds can only sow dismay
The ground on which no child will play
So there it is, I have no more No words to lay upon this score No glue to bind and heal my pride
A hole, so ever deep and wide

Broken Twice Over

You try to find something of interest To draw your attention away

That is how you move onward Slogging through an endless day

Both the former and latter examples Have thrown you completely away

In that, some things are left broken Things to never be remade

It's funny how it holds together
The pieces that suddenly may Crumble from most frequented usage

In this great cauldron of decay

The model is no more that perfect
No matter what they may say

For cracks will never be seamless Fractured pieces will never stay

And that pretty much sums all things
As you make your way through the day

Boxes II

Here I am just lying here Light from outside creeping in From under the blinds Trying to find the way in Shadows finding the corners
I wrote about this once before Three lines connecting...

The dream was sordid
But there were interlopers Intruding, deflecting, engaging But only for so long
The journey had to be made The passage through the door
And the grime that lay beyond

But melatonin ran out And here I lay, just me
With no excuses, no one to blame A silent place, even with me here And the ringing of my ears Trying just to fathom
The meaning of it all

Boxes

The sun rises slowly deliberately to illuminate a dark sarcophagus of fractured dreams disconnected seemingly random indistinct moments vying to make sense of the night to make sense of the life now stirring reluctantly desperately grasping somnolence

Eyes open to a dim corner three lines connecting structured a containment for lost dreams the warmth of slumber a soft embrace fleeing as reality materializes into conscious starkness brilliance and hard lines accentuated by a screaming clock

Born of Chaos II

dreams that manifest themselves in your life driving the warded path, down the dreaded road of wrath i've written about their eyes, their stance how I've always tried to avoid their glance shadows just remain in the shadows it's hard to be it's hard to see the possibilities when you never take a chance when you never dance the improbable dance against reality no matter the rival awaits with tools and talents instilled do you, oh fearful one, have the skills to face their atrocities to test the possibilities to overcome in victory

Born of Chaos

What if you were born to fuck things up?
You know, really fuck things up!
Whether anyone acknowledges it or not, it is very much the truth.

The illegitimate son of a minister, who never even met his dad.
Born to a schizophrenic mother, who stayed eternally mad.

Well, I'd say that's pretty fucked up!
And so I was for a very long time.
Looking back, that fear is now gone, fear of being known as something wrong.

And wrong have I forever been - just a byproduct of unholy sin, a mockery of those who say, "Amen!", and that's just where it begins.

It creates a certain kind of mind, with hope that you will one day find a reason, a reason for being somewhat unaligned with the rest of mankind.

And don't think that they don't know.
They've certainly let me know how low I've been.
That is one thing that has been certain in a world of sin, upon sin - over, and over again.

So, I just walk into the room, and sometimes that is all that it takes to call out the fakes, and change the stakes - cause the aligned to put on the brakes, take a new take.

They just can't understand what drives the unaligned man to be who he is, to do what he does, to think what he thinks under the sun, in a world that never cared or loved.

That makes the path just a little bit different.
When you adjust to the realm of the unjust, and see the rusty state of it all, and know the fated fall will come, not just for the one, but for all.

Here, let me, who is free from collective fear take the wheel and steer us down a path empty of a world most aligned ones would find so very dear.

And that's where you lose them.
They just can't fathom your world. That is when you find that you've been hurled into a role you never thought you would play.
So there it is, another day - refusing to obey, as they say.

Normality for a sigma may not be normal at all, but as I said earlier, we all must verily fall.
So when I walk into a room,
I will simply take my chances, do it the way I must do, freestyle everything that can be done before the unknown, before freefall

Blue Mask

A little more green than blue A serenely pleasant hue

The swells, the sways, the winds Warnings, the lighthouse sends Half hearted they are today Beautiful, will people say

A scene so consistently true With a peaceful blue-green hue

But decay lies beneath With its gnawing chewing teeth

Patiently taking all down Without an audible sound

A watery dark grave below
All of us will one day go

But the blue-green scene above Is all that we will dream of

As creatures lurk in remains And life-like semblances wane

A truth will make itself known With those to whom it is shown

How much life and all of its days Time and all that it weighs

Can take us to the depths below
So we quietly come to know

That the serenely pleasant hue Is a cold dark shade of blue

Black Orchids

From out of the dark, did she come to mark one as unfortunate as me Clutching orchids dark upon skin so stark, and vaguely shimmering
And so it began one night in the sand at midnight where twelve did stand eagerly waiting for thirteen

She traced out a star that looked like a scar in the helpless sands that be In the heart of the scar that the petals would mar when they were laid so gingerly Came a black twisted hand with the stench of the land in the darkening sand - marking the hour as thirteen

I did not go far from this scene so bizarre before the hand did land upon me
And out on this bar, none would hear my alarm in the watery world surrounding All went black as my head did land in the darkened sand of this withering land at sea - all in the hour of thirteen

My thoughts were like tar out on the sandbar as I sluggishly tried to see
I heard from afar the sounds that would mar my future, my hopes, my dreams
A whisper, a name as I lay on the strand holding the hand of a lady of sand in the hour of thirteen
She left her mark with a hand so dark, I would never be able to retreat
The name she spoke out in the dark as she stood so starkly at sea Would seal my fate as the man of the strand who lived in the sand of a vanishing land that she named Eugene

So if at sea you embark in the realm of the dark near the hour of thirteen
And a strand so stark where lay orchids so dark greet thee sweetly No more will you see land except for this strand of sand where liest Eugene

betrayed

always the hands of another one close to you, never suspect it was willing to blow your cover to end both you, and your prospects always from blue, you discover the schemes you could never detect always cuts deep, no recover lost your fondness... respect for these are the ways of the selfish of those who can no longer care and these are the days that they relish when none but themselves will be spared but these are the days that be hellish to those who were not yet prepared yet these are the days that will perish when devils drive home all despair

i hope you can patiently weather the trials that are set to beset i hope you'll take hold of your tether rip yourself free for the threat i hope its gaze does not measure the stance where your feet have been set i hope all schemes of betrayer it's plans, do end in a check

Bereft

Before I could even understand Everything this world would offer Removal from society, is where I land Indentured, enslaved and beaten Fraught with fear and damned
To remain forever cheated

Blinded by walls surrounding Envious of the world outside Remiss of respect - so demanded Ever aware of whose house I reside Forgotten, freely reprimanded To submit until my utter demise

Bravery would slowly take root Ending the acquiescence Rejection would soon follow suit Enhancing a running license From there on, would try to reboot Then remove the childhood sentence

bastardis in praecipitium

You must not look into the abyss, and follow the paths of darkness

You should stand here of your own below the firmament of all

You are not aware of your place of the deeds you must fulfill

You have no choice in these matters one must guide you from your fall

Your mind cannot control these things You have no rights with which to go to the place of your reckonings, to your father's royal halls

base

thoughts as they roll into my mind like heavy swells of ocean waves of emotion slowly unbind to find themselves cast as devotion written onto page after page after page my pen continually in motion words to only remind me of illegitimacy a bastard a long lost scotian

Autumn Dreams

My dreams can be gray
When it comes to the future
But they lead to what will be
We will gather once more In a great celebration Fellowship, I foresee
I know it will be significant For there is a large multitude Traversing my dream sea Focusing all their travels To a single point, one place
As a vortex of autumn leaves For our presence as a people As a nation from the past Still have some devotees
And in that, there is still hope That when we congregate
There will be smiles
And we, will be we

Another Variant of King Richard

Oh how great a thing Royalty
Or so I am told

With a swinging swinger Jested
Yet very very bold

On a night of winners
All Losing
What little control

A show of standards Degrading
A sight to behold

Oh, look at the drama Crying
Lies to be sold

Anathema

so you wake up in a world that doesn't know you a broken shard of a mirror lying flat upon a bed a bed you've neglected to replace with dull springs years of use have left them all but dead enough to leave some pain in an overused spine, in an overused life suspended by a thread another day you'll find something to fill the void that large echoing chamber where everything bled out as if it was never even there to begin with just a stain, forever pooling outward, to spread all that was lost from the wound, from the word so sharp, it should never be said

An Illegal Alien Lives In My Birdhouse

I initially got the house for a wren
As they frequently did visit me But that is not what has moved in

A Cuban tree frog, is what I got Is it right to allow him to stay
He is happily safe here, is he not

But he eats all of his Florida brothers Which I now see less and less He creates a monoculture absent of others

I do now know when it is going to rain For he will come out and tell me His Cuban song makes it very very plain

But I wanted to create a home for a wren With a very different kind of song
I guess Plucky the Frog is where this story will end

Amber

The fields take on a different hue
With the subtle bite that's in the air
It is the greatest season of them all

A time to gather what is needed To store away all that has been made And prepare for the darkness to come

The darkness truly will come With a different kind of gathering A gathering of close proximities

At least that is the great hope That there will be needed warmth Comfort in the cold dead storm ahead

But now is the time to consider What it has all been about This instinctual moment of provisions

I will look back on this season And reminisce on the bounties Even though the night must prevail

Age of the Zombie II

The conflagrations have been set
And we long for retribution
All the Angles and the Sachs Must endure it's execution

We are blinded by the waves Of self-inflicted self-oppression And we won't ever ever see Our hateful self-reflection

It matters not, there's no good reason For our embers of aggression All must pay, all must kneel
As we preach our domination

What was learned about enslavement Well, just give us reparation It's the only thing to do
As we covet compensation

Age of the Zombie (The Obedient Patient)

A youthful sting has struck
The virus - unrelenting And those who were not wary Have found themselves consenting It started without fathers With mother's condescensions To nestle in her breasts With no fathers ever mentioned Asleep - the willing patrons In a place of soft agreements Where the harshness in the world Mustn't challenge their achievements
The world, it has been taken And placed in isolation Locked in cushioned bounds And inward contemplations Fevers wreck our minds
Our anger, unrestrained We'll bite with blitzkrieg blindness All freedoms must be chained
They threaten mom's investments And challenge her endowments They've wrecked the inward sanctum And questioned all our talents We wont think of what we do When we set the conflagrations Just purge and cleanse the world To keep our comfy stations

æfensang

Dusk sets upon the fields waiting for the cold cold night.
Breezes yield to stillness steeled against the even blight.
Shadows cleave the grains - those who wander fields at night.
For night is what remains when the moon has cast its light on those who feign possessions of meadows full and spright, and dance amongst the grist of grasses that recite the songs of nightly sorrows that the shadows never write.

Act of Defiance

Little mimosa, how we love you as you close your leaves.

But even you, after too much,
will ignore our tease.

How do you know,
little mimosa,
that we are as breeze?

How can you see?
How can you think to refute our pleas that you obey, that you behave in days such as these!

acquiesce

what has come over me they've told me every one you're not wanted you're not valued you do not belong

you never did shall I take my leave as the sun sets this twilight this eve

before the downfall of all before this world hits the wall before the dread and the pall do make their debut

i think i've had enough a lifetime of resistance of facing the selfish of warding their greed their ever present need to feed on what you did never attain it's really a shame when the back must be turned when the world must be spurned rejected and burned at least, in my mind well

night, it has arrived will i survive and make something new

Abode

The beginning of a wooded trail That leads to an ancient ground Trodden for a thousand years
... and nothing ever found Solitude in this mountainous wood The delicate sounds of the leaves Insects are creeping all under foot Chewing all that will not be A home of the ancient resides above Mandrakes rule the quiet grounds
A heavy feeling begins to flood And churn all the wooded sounds An existence that few believe to be A waiting presence that time has bound What awaits me in yonder lee
The peaceful journey, is no more found Heaviness weighs the wilderness A quietness that speaks so loud Intriguing feelings that ever lure me To the heavy abode on ancient ground

A Tribute to Sand

There are prints to be deciphered in a medium that does not last.
In a time that will not wait for hopeful human fate.

The homeland has been battered, brought back to its long lost past.
Memory, a washed up date, on the edge of a sandbar state.

Dates, well, they blow away too.
They flow and flow through a glassy tube only to bury us all in a sandy tomb, as if we'd never left the earthly womb.

Weathered, worn, and indelible.
A message born on a beach that slipped beneath a stage, into a quickened crypt.
All but a memory, pitted, stripped.

Of anything treasured like life itself.
Of anything bought off the store shelf.
Of anything you thought you permanently held in a sinking sandy void.

?????, so that is your name, your claim to fame, to the detriment and pain of those who deciphered your name.

'Flame'? Does that mix with your watery theme?
Your quenching scheme to stifle screams & send them downstream.

Hélène! The most destructive fury we've ever seen.

A Tocobagan Riddle for Today

It's not completely round, it's the beginning of a teardrop. As if it's cohesion to the past has only just begun. It hasn't, of course, just begun - it goes back a long way. When Desoto came, did he cry here? Or was it the denizens that here cried? After all, they paid the consequences in totality. But here it is, nonetheless. The known, but unknown lake. The Mirror that reflects my approach and my wonder. The tears that filled this basin still lament memory's passing, history's retreat.

In an age where only the fleeting importance of emotion does matter. When the reasons for tears no longer have substance, no longer have depth, the basin becomes shallow. Today's tears do not fill the void, but only reveal. Nothing can be traced to a tragedy. Nothing. No foundation to build upon. No feat, no great loss, no mystery, and certainly no intrigue.

When I now gaze into this tear shaped Mirror from the past, and know who was here, and know the cost, I begin to understand the mystery. I begin to perceive that those who stare back were far greater than me. Faces that this generation will never see.

A Poet's Mantra

There's an energy behind the words.
They would not exist without it.
How could anyone ever doubt it, who had the power inside themselves to bring a story to life?

There's a meaning in the script that goes deeper than you know.
It happens when the words begin to flow from the deep dark hold that comprises a very soul.

There's a way to transform oneself through the passages of time.
Experiences written in rhyme, transcending the cosmos of an existence, buried inside.

A Liter and Promises of Broken Thoughts

An Oktoberfest in September A harvest in certain season To comprehend the reason For our monthly possibilities

May Märzen be the month
That may yet set a standard That up till now, unanswered Will fill with devotees

For amber is the color That fills the longing void An individual not devoid Of un-sobering proclivities

A Human Menagerie

'Heavy' - a word denoting weight to be borne under the auspices and the tenets of life.

Molded by trials, pain, words of scorn - another product of an irreverent, but rife nature, that is, blinded to all those born, determined to cast into a chasm of strife.

Enshrined semblances as tendrils of smoke.

'Smoke' - the ephemeral offerings of life to be dispersed to eternitiy's vast vast scope in hope of an embrace, as an eternal wife now married to all mortal's great great hope Yeshua, creator, granter ... immortal life.

And so every body does choose to go naively down life's sloping path.

Detours lead astray, all along the road.

Thus an end story subject to wrath having gone contrary to the flow.

Endings to every single path.

Trails, that branch, leading all men to naught, regardless of their confident, boastful ways.

i n a sense, we're all just strays, all at fault a ll subject to trials in this ominous play

I eading to the suffering we bought.

S uffering, everywhere, everyday...

T
H
E
R

E
O F

'Heavy' - a word denoting weight to be borne, and who hasn't bore the heavy weight? If they haven't, they will. We're all in this together, and yet, separately we crack, we break, we fail, only to leave this world solitarily, as those who were with us won't come along. They can't. We're made to belong, yet in the end, we sing alone.

Seems hopeless, right? But, hope there is. It's part of our structure, our being. We're made with it. It's part of the sentence - to know both good and evil. That denotes choice, because ultimately, it is a lesson. Have I learned the lessons of the weight that I bore? Do I care about the solitary figure next to me? If there is nothing else, then it should be that. To let the one who will ultimately sing alone, to let them know that someone heard their song, that in some ethereal way, someone sang along.

A Dream Exposed

There they sit staring, and why not?
Why are they there, though, and why am I here at the back of this cemetery lot?
They're sitting calmly at their fire... are they drinking beer?
Hmm.

I remember waking up this night with my clothes by my side.
I remember the tombstone, and the anxiousness to proceed.
The feelings of grass on my feet, and nothing to hide.
Carrying my clothes, I guess I was newly freed.
Strange.

There's the gate that I needed to walk through.
Behind that gate was something true, a place I had to go to,
but it wasn't possible this night.
A white truck with black windows was coming through.
Blacker than black were windows with no view.

Somehow, I couldn't let them see me.
Somehow, I was naked and afraid.
That truck was everything that should not be,
and because of it, another path was laid.
So down the graveyard road I went, unperceived.

Two joggers came running by.
It's funny how they couldn't see me, but it was dark, and I guess that's just my lot in life.
Walking through a cemetery unseen and stark, with two campers as witness at the back of a midnight park.

Why didn't I put on the clothes?

Who the hell knows.

?????? ??????

Not grey, not quite, but a muted space.
Evening's impression embracing the view.
Fallen are the boundaries that held in place ethereal beauty that once was new.
Lost to the night, your empirical grace; iridescent memories we formerly knew.
Both joy and peace, all now encased as a box of sentiments we long outgrew.
'Tomorrow' - a word that feels as misplaced as a cloud in a mirror that once was blue.

?????? / ???? / ??????

Three magicians came from the east To find what they were looking for Tribute after Tribute after Tribute

Where did they come from, to see What understanding did they take back Lesson upon Lesson upon Lesson

Did they take it home just to preserve For what is carried away must come back Witness after Witness after Witness

Something revealed and learned again Denotes a vacuum in the knowledge Loss after Loss after Loss

And why would it be the magicians How were they the ones found worthy Question after Question after Question

Maybe they had just to acknowledge The great stone that had to be borne Step after Step after Step

3rd of Sh'vat

Darest I venture outside On this most profound of days What is it I will behold In our cauldron of decay

A roiling mass of anger
A treacherous road of hate Some bitter accusations
From all of those in that state

The danger that I fear most Is that of declining fate
A place where all great nations Are becoming reprobate

When all the chosen people From their slumber rise too late And mourn all of the morsels Being taken from their plate

I hope you hear my sorrow
As I fathom our sad ways And count the horrid hours Racing to the end of days

... are of a kind with those of myth;

Yankee Dave was his name - a moniker of pride here in the deep deep south.
Brave, in your face, and fearless to a fault - false teeth ever gleaming in a toothless mouth.

He wasn't old ... no ... not by far, but motor-bikes and hard ground are ruthless to a ceaseless, and un-ending smile that, again, will leave you toothless.

He didn't care because life went on - more adventures and more to conquer, like swinging from a branch ... chainsaw in hand ... branches and trees, no longer ... standing, as it were, for they were conquered, and that, after all, was the whole point for the out-of-place, Florida moniker.

Yankee Dave was his name, and thus he was appointed.