Little boy lost

My loneliness

What a mother learns

As a mother,
Here are somethings,
That I have came to learn,
About my little boys.

My boys loves toys,
My boys loves dirt,
My four year old,
Really loves to flirt.

This is what a mother learns,
The boys loves to scream,
They love to shout,
If they all could,
They would run all about.

My three year old,
Loves his cookies and cars,
If you mess with them,
You will get bitten scars.

This is what a mother learns,
They smile,
They grin,
They get snotty noses,
So I wipe them.

My one year old,
Loves to growl,
He is always on the prowl,
He is my cute sweetie pie.

This is what a mother learns you see.

Little boy lost

A little boy,
That became,
Lost deep,
Within the woods.

While its below freezing,
Winter brings,
Lots of sorrow,
And worry.

People walking,
Through stark of trees,
Looking for limbs and leaves,
everyday, every night.

Having hope,
Running on faith,
Finding that little boy,
Whose lost in the woods.

In the end,
The discovery,
Really was not right,
But at least your not in the woods tonight.
Now your up,
In the heavens gate,
While your looking down,
With that sweet smiling face.

My loneliness

I often see things,
That people can not find,
Because these things,
Are deep within my mind.

My visions often frighten me,
From deep within my soul,
These visions are so clear,
When its you I hold.

My loneliness made me,
Feel tough and weak,
From which I feel ashamed,
This pain has left,
When you said my name.

I see things are so clear,
For what they are,
My heart has made,
All my loneliness disappear!
