

Anthology of David Prestigiacomo

Presented by

My poetic Side

summary

Abandoned Love..

Lost..

Abandoned Love..

As the sun rose and peered through my window, I rolled over trying to avoid the light and discovered my beautiful miracle laying right next to me that I had spent all night praying for.. You slowly opened your angelic eyes and looked up to me with a smile upon your face and when I asked how you got here, you just replied that you were heaven sent to help me repel this wicked curse on love and help me to believe again.. You wrapped your delicate arms around me until my head was resting upon your shoulders and you whispered into my ear, "We are the believers of the make believe, because now we'll always have each other as we work daily to make all of our dreams come true.." We jumped up and ran into the bathroom together to capture the image of us in the mirror, because at last we have a love so simple and true.. We made our way into the kitchen where we found all of our ingredients of love spread all across the counter; so we decided to grab a bite from the corner store, and as we got mounted onto my motorcycle, we started zooming.. As we rode through the valley of the lost that's when I told you that I didn't know what to do before I met you, but now I have my future sitting with me.. You ignite emotions inside myself that I've never felt before, and I hope that these feelings stay with me forevermore because you're the only one that I'll ever truly adore.. Will you take ahold of my hand and allow me to take a knee as I ask for your love to never abandon me in the streets..

Lost..

I'm lost, pacing the halls in search of a light to illuminate the darkness, when all of a sudden I stumble upon your magical sunshine, with the keys hanging around your neck, representing an eternally blessed life. Suddenly, I fumbled upon your magical sunshine, with the keys hanging around your neck representing an eternally blessed life. But just as I ran up to you, you vanished into the night. I can still feel your embrace as the breeze caresses me, and I sense your tender arms wrapping around me. Yet when I turn, it's just the hope in my soul playing tricks on my mind.

Your eyes hold galaxies, and I want to explore all the different planets with you as we discover the true values of a family because you are my everything. Will you look into my empty heart and pour your water onto it until it blossoms with new life? I'm dying in this heatwave without you, and I need you to remind me that I can find peace in everything I do.

You crashed into my arms and lifted the weight of the world from my shoulders, making me eternally grateful that I found you. You saved me from the downfall of society. You prove daily that if two people genuinely love each other, there will never be any reason to argue because we are bigger than that. I always need you in my corner because you're the only one who sat with me to weather the storm. I eternally need you to help me crush all of these boulders into dust. I find myself wandering in the dark, desperately searching for a light when, unexpectedly, I came across your radiant warmth. The keys around your neck symbolize an eternally blessed life, but just as I reached for you, you faded into the night. I still feel your presence, as if the gentle breeze is your embrace wrapping around me. Yet, when I turn, it's merely the flickering hope in my soul playing tricks on my mind.

When you crashed into my arms, you lifted the crushing weight of the world from my shoulders, filling me with an overwhelming gratitude for your presence. You are my salvation amidst the chaos of life. Each day, you demonstrate that genuine love eliminates the need for conflict, proving that we transcend any arguments. I need you by my side, for you are the only one willing to endure the storms with me. Together, let's shatter all the boulders in our path and emerge stronger than ever.. Your eyes hold galaxies, and I only want to explore all of the different planets with you as we learn the true values of a family, because you are my everything.. Will you look into my empty heart and pour your water onto it until it sprouts with new leaves, because I'm dying in this heatwave without you and I need you to remind me that I can find peace in everything I do.. You crashed into my arms and lifted the weight of the world from upon my shoulders making me forever grateful that I found you, for you saved me from the downfall of society.. You prove daily that if two people genuinely love each other there will never be any worry for any arguing, because we are bigger than that.. I always need you in my corner, because you're the only one who sat with me to endure the storm and I eternally need you to help me crush all the boulders into dust..